Scouting Plane Locates Debris of Crash Scattered Over Mountain Side in Western Pennsylvania

By MARBEN GRAHAM.
UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 7.—(AP)

Rescue crews working in a driving snowstorm carried the bodies of 11 persons from the wreckage of a giant Transcontinental & Western Air liner to an improvised morgue on western Pennsylvania's highest mountain peak tonight.

Through deep mud and thick underbrush the bodies—some of them burned—were transported over a narrow lumber road, hardly more than a trail.

There a horse-drawn wagon and a truck formed the cortege which moved slowly, along the muddy, tortuous path to the summit atop the mountain. The bodies were placed in the garage of a resort hotel there. Tomorrow they will be removed to Uniontown.

The bodies of eight had been taken from the wrecked transport plane before the snowstorm began. Emergency

Rapid Gains in N. J. Made by Roosevelt

NEW YORK, April 7.—New Jersey, safely repudiated three months ago, today is exactly on the line, with half the voters favoring a republican for president, half favoring the re-election of Roosevelt. The American Institute of Public Opinion made this announcement here today on the basis of returns in its current poll.

The question asked was: "If the presidential election were today, for which candidate would you vote?" In the 1932 election New Jersey gave Roosevelt 51 votes for each 49 marked for Hoover.

Roosevelt's recent rapid rise in New Jersey is clearly shown by the following table:

	Would Vote	Would Vote
	Roosevelt	Republican
January	46%	54%
February	47	53
March	48	52
April	50	50

Two opposing opinions exist among experts to explain the sudden rush of New Jersey voters to Roosevelt: (1) That sentiment toward the President has changed, and (2) that Republican Governor Harold G. Hoffman's actions in the Lindbergh case met with strong disapproval at the time the polls were taken.

Complete figures showing Roosevelt's present popular strength in each of the 48 states will be published exclusively in The Atlanta Constitution next Sunday.

Atlantan's Brother Plane Crash Victim

Stanley Bayersdorfer, one of 11 persons who met death yesterday when a transcontinental airliner crashed in the Alleghany mountains near Uniontown, Pa., is a brother of Mrs. Donald Oberdorfer, wife of a prominent Atlanta insurance company official.

First reports were that Bayersdorfer was one of the three survivors of the crash, but it was later learned he was among the dead brought to Uniontown.

Mrs. Oberdorfer left at 6:20 last night by train for Steubenville, Ohio. Bayersdorfer was head of a large department store there. He was said to have been returning from a business trip to New York.

TOWNSENDITES HIT SENATE PROBES

Directors Reorganize Plan on National Basis; Highly, Clements Assailed.

BALTIMORE, April 7.—(AP)—Directors of the Townsend plan reorganized the national movement today and at the same time challenged the congressional investigation of its affairs as being "unwarranted and unconstitutional."

At the end of an all-day session in Los Angeles, named Don Wills, was hired to fight from the organization Walter Townsend, a brother of Dr. F. E. Townsend, co-founder with Clements of the movement, in an attempt to gain control. Differences between Dr. Townsend and Clements over what were called efforts of the former to "democratize" the movement were detailed.

At the meeting here, Dr. Townsend again denied "rumors" that he planned to resign as national president and asserted he intended "to stay in."

MILWAUKEE, April 7.—(AP)—Independent Wisconsin state conference pledged to support Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, in the national convention held the state executive committee's unopposed slate early returns tonight from the delegate election.

On the democratic ticket, which appeared to have attracted a greater number of voters, the state conference endorsed slate pledged to President Roosevelt seemed headed for victory by outdistancing its few opponents. The President received 18,123 votes in 242 of the state's 2,918 precincts.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., April 7. At last we know wherein the League of Nations really functions. It keeps a good set of statistics.

It says that in the world are 24,000,000 unemployed, and of this total more than half are in the United States. Since we are spending more government funds to aid the idle than any country, can it be there are persons among us who prefer staying on relief projects to taking regular jobs?

Next time I pass a public works undertaking, I'm going to put the question to help reduce unemployment, for purposes, but the shovel is preferable for fanning. Once in awhile it slips and gouges the earth slightly, but accidents will happen, and the foreman comes along and replaces the dirt and then all is well again. Plan Is Termed a 'Gamble' and 'Embarrassing' Program to Business.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, representing a portion of organized business, today denounced the administration's $750,000,000 tax program as "embarrassing" to business and a "gamble."

In a last-minute appearance before the house ways and means committee closed its public hearings with the start of actual bill drafting scheduled for tomorrow, Fred H. Clausen, chairman of the chamber's committee on federal finances, led an organized assault against the plan.

A heavy-set, gray-haired manufacturer from Horizon, Wis., Clausen listed four other tax bills in the last four years, and declared with slow emphasis:

"You will pardon the expression if I say that you are 'running us ragged.'"

Nothing that President Roosevelt had called upon business in his relief message to help reduce unemployment, Clausen urged the committee to "give business an opportunity" to meet the challenge of the President "which I hope is friendly."

"This is a period when the government cannot afford to gamble in this manner with its revenue," he said.

EX-LAW PARTNER DEFENDS RITTER

A. L. Rankin, Florida Attorney, Tells of Splitting Receivership Fees.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—New testimony regarding cash payments to Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter, of Florida, split receivership fees, and only partial income tax reporting of such fees by a witness was received by the senate today in its impeachment trial of the southern jurist.

The evidence came in further examination of the first of more than 50 witnesses. A. L. Rankin, West Palm Beach attorney and former law partner of the defendant. Late in the day Frank P. Walsh, of defense counsel, started the cross-examination.

Under questioning by Representative Hobbs, democratic Alabama, of the prosecution staff of three, Rankin told of receiving $75,000 as a receivership fee allowed by Ritter. He testified to keeping $45,000 of the fees of $90,000 himself and dividing the remainder among other lawyers and the receiver.

He also described payment of $4,500 to Ritter in discharge of a law partnership dissolution debt, denying the $4,500 came out of the receivership fees.

Rankin, under Hobbs' questioning, again testified that he paid Ritter in Business Leaders Pledge $20,000 As Relief Fund Mounts to $45,000

Necessity of Prompt Response to Red Cross Plea for Aid Is Stressed; Donors Warned To Make Gifts Only Through Authorized Agents.

Moreton M. Rolleston, in charge of the relief fund drive.

Atlanta business leaders met yesterday not only to insure prompt donations, but also to appoint a committee to assist other relief agencies in a quick rehabilitation of the Gainesville storm area. T. K. Glenn, prominent Atlanta financier, appointed chairman of the committee, late yesterday offered the services of his associates to the Red Cross. All attending the meeting pledged themselves to get the largest donations possible.

May Stem Deaths.

Although Mr. Rolleston, first relief worker to reach storm-torn Gainesville Monday, declared contributions thus far were "splendid," he nevertheless pointed out the necessity of many additional subscriptions, which may be used quickly. Many deaths and much suffering, he said, may be prevented by a hasty flow of funds to Gainesville.

Business leaders pledging subscriptions to the storm sufferers yesterday were, in addition to Mr. Glenn of the Trust Company of Georgia, J. D. Robinson, of the First National Bank; H.

REHABILITATION BEGUN IN TUPELO

Many Victims of Tornado-Ravaged City Buried With Aid of CCC Boys.

TUPELO, Miss., April 7.—(AP)—Tupelo settled itself to a gigantic rehabilitation task tonight after burying many of its 192 storm-mangled dead in hurriedly prepared graves.

The work of interring those who perished in Sunday night's roaring, death-dealing tornado fell to those who escaped the fury of the black horror that smashed a path across the city a mile wide and four miles long. They were aided by a large corps of civilian conservation workers, who dug the graves and stood silently by as grief-stricken relatives murmured prayers.

Each of the city's 12 ministers, all of whom were rendered churchless by the storm, joined in the services, which were brief and simple and for the most part observed at graveside.

The largest and probably the simplest funeral was held at Priceville, small community west of Tupelo, where the Jim Burroughs family was laid to rest.

Burroughs, his wife and 11 children, ranging in age from 4 months to 17 years, were killed when their home collapsed.

Shortly after noon their bodies were lifted onto a single truck from an improved morgue and carried to a community burial plot.

35-Foot-Long Grave.

There a huge grave, 35 feet long and seven feet wide, had been prepared. One by one the bodies were lowered into the pit and arranged according to age. A few relatives and neighbors sobbed softly and turned away.

Similar scenes were enacted at the city cemetery and at a dozen community plots.

Services will be held for other of the dead tomorrow and still others.

Approval Given, Subject to Council, To Decide Issue at Fall Primary.

Atlanta voters will probably decide whether they want to reorganize the administrative branch of the municipal government and substitute a city manager for the present system in the fall primary on September 2. At the same time they will select nominees for 38 various city positions.

Members of the city democratic executive committee in the first meeting of the year last night decided that Councilman John A. White's proposed council-city manager plan of local governmental operation will be placed before the voters if city council and Mayor Key approve the program, which is now pending before the charter revision committee of city council.

White predicted overwhelming council support for the plan and forecast that it will have a preferential place on the primary ballot.

Aldermanic Vote As Before.

In addition, the six aldermen to be nominated will be voted on by the entire electorate of the municipality as they have for many years in the past. The committee voted unanimously to support the present system of nominations even though such a vote was not necessary.

State and Nation Rush Plans To Aid In Bringing Order

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SENDS AID TO MAKE SURVEY OF WRECKED AREA

Will Be Given Report Tomorrow at Warm Springs; Insurance Companies Assure City of Cash; Tragedy Stalks Streets as Relatives Watch Workers Seeking New Bodies.

By FRANK M. DRAKE,
Staff Correspondent.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 7.—As the toll of the dead, the injured and the damage to property continued to mount tonight, this stricken city went about the sorrowful work of burying its dead, began the almost superhuman task of digging itself out of its ruins and waited hopefully for messages from the outside world that succor was on its way.

There were 185 known dead, more than 1,250 injured and property damage estimated as high as $7,000,000.

Heart-torn survivors of the tornado of yesterday claimed the bodies of their loved ones today and began the ordeal of burying them. A number of dead remained unidentified and who they were may never be learned as many bodies are burned beyond recognition.

Mayor W. A. Palmour said that the unidentified bodies would be held for a day or two and if not claimed would be given public funerals.

With more than 200 persons listed as "not located" tonight, the Red Cross prepared to open a missing persons bureau. It is feared that a large number of those not located have been killed.

F.D.R. Allocates Funds To Aid Storm Victims

MIAMI, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—President Roosevelt tonight allocated $2,500,000 to the Works Progress Administration for immediate emergency work in the southeastern tornado area.

The President sent the order from the U. S. S. Potomac as he turned for shore to land tomorrow from his fishing cruise.

He sent the following message to-night to Mayor H. McIntyre, a secretary, here:

"I have been in close direct touch with the Red Cross, various relief administrations, emergency conservation officials and army officers in Washington."

They report that all federal agencies are co-operating in prompt and measured relief. I have allocated $2,500,000 to the Works Progress Administration for immediate work in the affected states."

ROOSEVELT PREPARING TO DISEMBARK TODAY

President Will Entrain for Georgia Home Upon Landing at Florida Port.

MIAMI, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—President Roosevelt was just off the Florida coast tonight ready to cruise into port tomorrow afternoon concluding his annual fishing trip in southern waters.

He spent the final day of his two weeks at sea fishing off Great Isaac Key due east about 80 miles from Fort Lauderdale.

Returning to shore tomorrow the President will land somewhere along the Florida coast probably at Port Everglades where he set out to sea two weeks ago last night.

Receiving wireless reports on the tornado disaster in the southeastern states, Mr. Roosevelt was informed today by Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross, that "conservative estimates" place the dead at 425 with 1,725 seriously injured and more than 3,200 homes destroyed or damaged.

"Local Red Cross officers and our national staff," said Grayson in a report to the President, "are in charge at each point and needs are being met."

Reporting on relief work in the northeastern and middle west states, Admiral Grayson stated federal agencies have co-operated fully with the Red Cross in aiding 500,000 persons affected by the disaster.

He stated to the President that emergency work is about ended and rehabilitation of families is under way.

Mr. Roosevelt will entrain tomorrow afternoon immediately upon landing and will go to his Warm Springs (Ga.) home to spend Thursday. He will return to the White House about noon on Friday.

Gen. Pershing, Cited for Speeding, Says Driver Will Answer Charge

College Youths of America Called on To Mobilize Against Traffic Accidents; Careful Driving Is Urged.

MODESTO, Cal., April 7.—(AP)—General John J. Pershing was cited today for speeding, three highway patrol officers who once served under the wartime commander as enlisted men, making the charge.

Police Officer Cecil Kilroy, of Turlock, said he chased the general's luxurious 16-cylinder automobile as it passed through Turlock yesterday.

Kilroy declared the car was traveling 45 miles an hour in a 25-mile zone. The machine was stopped at Modesto by Officers Ira Shields and Urbane Pickering. General Pershing was cited to appear in the Turlock justice court April 16.

"My driver will adjust the matter," Pickering quoted the general.

General Pershing and his sister, Miss Max Pershing, were en route to San Francisco.

COLLEGE YOUTHS URGED TO DRIVE CAREFULLY

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—The college youth of the United States was called on tonight to mobilize against traffic accidents.

Drivers from 18 to 24 years of age annually are involved in more than one-fifth of all motor vehicle accidents, disabled 500 miles due east of Wilmington, N. C., with a broken propeller shaft.

The Comercio is out of Puerto Rico for Boston with a cargo of sugar and has 34 in her crew. A representative of the New York and Puerto Rico Steamship Company of New York, owners of the vessel, also is said to be aboard.

Coast guard headquarters tonight said the Modoc could not reach the vessel until late tomorrow or Thursday and would stand by her until she obtained a tow. It was believed that one or more tugs would be dispatched to the ship to tow her to port.

U. S. SHIP GOES TO AID DISABLED STEAMER

NORFOLK, Va., April 7.—(AP)—The coast guard cutter Modoc steamed out of Wilmington this afternoon to stand by the American steamer Comercio.

Martin H. McIntyre, a secretary, will join the President upon his return tomorrow and proceed with him to the White House.

Fresh from his fishing expedition, Mr. Roosevelt will deliver an address early next week at Baltimore and later in the month will speak in New York.

MRS. ANNIE HARDMAN PASSES AT AGE OF 93

Friend of Henry W. Grady Will Be Buried in Forsyth County.

Mrs. Annie Leona Hutchins Hardman, a personal friend of Henry W. Grady and one of the most widely known women in Georgia, died early yesterday morning at her residence, 824 Briarcliff road, where she lived with her daughters, Mrs. Ethel H. York and Mrs. R. M. Mitchell Jr.

Mrs. Hardman, who was 93, had a wide knowledge of classic literature, and was conversant with and keenly interested in national and international affairs, despite her advanced years.

Among her many friends is Dr. Louis D. Newton, who, informed of her death said:

"The first time I ever saw Mrs. Hardman was at Clarksville, where she was spending the summer with her daughter, Mrs. York, as was her custom for a number of years.

"She was reading The Constitution—one of the late James A. Holloman's articles on the editorial page. I was editor of the Christian Index at that time, and when she found out that I was, she fell into a reminiscent mood about her newspaper friends through the long years of her life.

"She said, 'Yes, I knew Mr. Grady well. I often wrote to him from my Forsyth county home, telling him what the people in the mountains were thinking, and he would always thank me. I went to hear him speak every time I was in reach of him.

"We can never fully appreciate the contribution of Henry W. Grady to the south and the nation. He was a patriot and he seemed to me to be always on the right side of every question.

"Now I have just been reading this man Holloman's fine piece this morning. He has the right lick too. I don't know him like I did Mr. Grady and Mr. Harris, and I never had the privilege of meeting Frank L. Stanton, but I expect to listen to this poem by Stanton in his 'Just From Georgia' this morning. Isn't it a grand thing to have a man who can write like that?

"I have been reading The Constitution for over 70 years now, and I tell them that anybody that will study the newspapers will have a liberal education. Of course, I don't agree with a lot of things I read, but I read it nevertheless in order that I may know what is going on in the world."

Dr. Newton said that he found Mrs. Hardman, then 80, conversant with affairs in Europe and Asia, as well as America, and that she could talk interestingly about politics, agriculture, education, sociology, religion or any other subject of common interest to humanity.

"One afternoon I was by to see her and she turned to me, and said, 'I want you preachers to give the people the simple Gospel of Frank L. Stanton.'"

Dr. Newton continued: "Don't try to fix it up with a lot of trimmings, just tell them the old, old story of Jesus and His love. And I want you to remember this, there must be repentance before there can be salvation. You open that Bible there and read what it says about repentance—'except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.' I want you to remember that. I hear too much preaching over the radio that seems to me to be toning down religion until it doesn't mean anything. Preach repentance for sin and salvation by grace, and the people will hear you."

Mrs. Hardman could read until almost the end of her life, Dr. Newton said.

Besides her daughters, a son, O. A. Hardman, of Detroit, and nine grandchildren survive.

Final rites will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at the Spring Hill chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son. Dr. Louis D. Newton will officiate, and burial will be in Salem Baptist churchyard, Forsyth county.

RADIO CORPORATION IS RECAPITALIZED

Joseph P. Kennedy Receives Fee of $150,000 for Services.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Joseph P. Kennedy, former Securities and Exchange Commission chairman, received a fee of $150,000 for his services in the recapitalization of the Radio Corporation of America which was ratified by stockholders today.

Kennedy announced the fee himself at the close of a special meeting in response to a request of a stockholder. Statisticians and accountants were paid $50,000 for their services, he said.

David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation, announced the recapitalization plan had been approved by a vote well above a majority and that it would immediately be effective.

The plan provides for the redemption of all the outstanding 1 per cent "A" preferred R. C. A. stock at $55 a share, plus accrued dividends.

The redemption is to be effected by means of cash in the company's treasury and a loan of $10,000,000 from banks at 2 1/2 per cent a year. The bank loan is for five years and may be repaid at any time.

Another provision of the plan calls for the exchange of "B" preferred shares at the rate of 1 1/5 shares of new $3.50 cumulative preferred first preferred and one share of common for each share of "B" preferred.

The plan was drawn up under the direction of Kennedy, who was retained by the Radio Corporation board on December 27. He submitted it on January 23.

The plan came under fire from stockholders before coming to a vote and was defended by both Sarnoff and Kennedy.

The two-time presidential candidate of his party spoke on an NBC broadcast in a series of discussions on the constitution, under the auspices of a radio education committee, the American Political Science Association and the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Thomas emphasized the immediate need of a constitutional amendment "positively to confer upon congress power to enact necessary social and economic legislation for the welfare of the farmers, workers and consumers of America."

He pleaded support for the farmers' and workers' rights amendment introduced in congress by Representative William L. Warren, republican, New York.

The federal constitution, he said, "is an able document which served its day and generation when America was new, unpeopled, and power-driven machinery was relatively unknown."

From his theme that the nation was not ready for a convention to change the constitution, Thomas developed a contention "we can carry on fairly well with these changes."

He said that "at the end of the mischievous religion of the constitution; the need for an amendment providing for direct election of the president and vice president; most important of all, we must make democracy constitutional."

HEARING DATE IS SET IN S. C. POWER DISPUTE

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 7.—(AP)—Suits of three power companies against the $37,500,000 Santee-Cooper project will be heard by Federal Judge J. Lyles Glenn, of Chester, between May 11 and June 1 if the pleadings are ready.

Judge Glenn ordered in United States district court here today that the time for hearing the cases be fixed between those dates and said he would hear them at Rock Hill if the pleadings were in shape.

The judge made the decision after hearing a motion of the South Carolina public service authority, sponsor of the vast power and navigation project, that dates for the cases be fixed.

The motion to fix dates was made after the Carolina Power & Light Company, of Raleigh, N. C.; the South Carolina Power Company, of Charleston; and the Broad River Power Company, of Columbia, instituted proceedings for injunctions against the project and to restrain the federal government from furnishing the necessary funds.

ROOSEVELT TO CONFER WITH STATE MANAGER

President Roosevelt will confer with his Georgia managers during his brief stay at Warm Springs tomorrow. Campaign Manager Marion H. Allen would hear them at Rock Hill if the pleadings were in shape.

The President, who has just ended his fishing vacation off the Florida coast, asking Mr. Allen and Judge A. B. Lovett, of Savannah, chairman of the Roosevelt campaign committee, to meet with him at the Little White House.

"We are going to assure the President that he can forget about Georgia," Campaign Manager Allen said. "The state is safely in the Roosevelt column by an overwhelming margin."

tomorrow morning at the Spring Hill chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son. Dr. Louis D. Newton will officiate, and burial will be in Salem Baptist churchyard, Forsyth county.

ECONOMIC LEGISLATION ADVOCATED BY THOMAS

Nation Not Ready To Frame New Organic Law, Socialist Says.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Norman Thomas, socialist leader and director of the League for Industrial Democracy, said tonight the framing of a new federal constitution is required but that "we are not ready for it."

Pointing to a provision in the constitution for conventions to alter it, Thomas said, "As a socialist I do not want to call such a convention tomorrow or next year. We are not ready for it. Discussion has not gone far enough; the dynamic forces of change are not well enough developed."

His two-time presidential candidate of his party spoke on an NBC broadcast in a series of discussions on the constitution, under the auspices of a radio education committee, the American Political Science Association and the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Thomas emphasized the immediate need of a constitutional amendment "positively to confer upon congress power to enact necessary social and economic legislation for the welfare of the farmers, workers and consumers of America."

THOMAS PREDICTS RE-ELECTION OF F. D. R.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—Norman Thomas, two-time presidential candidate for president, predicted today that President Roosevelt would be re-elected "as the lesser of two evils."

The gray-haired veteran of many political campaigns said at a press conference that while he had not decided whether he would be a candidate for the presidency or for congress from a New York district this year, he would not support Mr. Roosevelt.

"Enough people are back of him already," he said, "and while his election is not a foregone conclusion he probably will remain in the White House, unless Borah should be nominated at the next election."

Giving the "socialist slant" on the coming campaign, Thomas made these observations about political figures and issues:

Hoover—"Now that he's wisecracking like Jimmy Walker he's out of character. He should have put on his new clothes more slowly than we get used to the new Hoover."

Governor Landon—"He has the best chance to get the republican nomination because no one can remember anything he's said and nobody is mad at him."

Colonel Frank Knox—"He made a Jeffersonian speech in Texas and was deservedly kidded for it."

President Roosevelt—"He has an experimental mind but he oscillates on the same plane and there's nothing revolutionary about his ideas."

HOUSE CONSIDERS WEED PACT BILL

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—Proposed federal legislation authorizing tobacco growing states to enter into mutual agreements to control production was advocated and assailed today as the house opened debate on the Kerr tobacco compact bill.

Representative Clark, of North Carolina, declared such legislation was necessary if tobacco growers were to continue to receive the benefits they did under the invalidated Agriculture Adjustment Act.

Opposing the measure, Representative Hays, republican, of Michigan, declared the bill was based upon the philosophy of scarcity which already had been held unconstitutional by the supreme court.

ARE CONVICTED UNDER MANN ACT

Woman, Ex-Chauffeur Charged With Transporting Girls; Sentence Deferred.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Mae Scheible and Joseph Ryan were convicted by federal jury late today of violating the Mann act in connection with the transportation of five young women from Pittsburgh to New York.

The jury reached its verdict 11 hours after retiring.

Mrs. Scheible was convicted on 11 counts of the 15 with which she was charged, making her liable to a prison sentence of 82 years and a fine of $50,000. Ten counts charged actual transportation of five girls for immoral purposes from Pittsburgh to New York. The eleventh count charged conspiracy.

Ryan, Mrs. Scheible's former chauffeur, was convicted on six counts of eight, five charging transportation and one charging conspiracy. He is liable to a sentence of 42 years and a fine of $30,000.

Judge John C. Knox postponed sentence until next Monday.

"Any other verdict would have been a miscarriage of justice," Judge Knox said when the jury reported.

"This means that we will not stand for trafficking in human souls."

Mrs. Scheible and Ryan were permitted to go free on their bail, Mrs. Scheible in $10,000 and Ryan in $4,000.

FEDERAL ROAD FUNDS SOUGHT BY GEORGIA

Chairman Wilburn Appeals to State's Congressional Members for Aid.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—All members of the Georgia congressional delegation Monday received copies of a letter from Chairman W. E. Wilburn, of the state highway board, asking their co-operation in obtaining approval of a new proposal for releasing federal highway funds pending settlement of the present controversy over state finances.

Chairman Wilburn inclosed in his letter to delegation members a copy of a communication just sent to Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, who was urged to make payments due Georgia directly to the state highway board in lieu of the de facto state treasurer, whose status is involved in court litigation.

The state highway chairman contended that the federal roads bureau could remit Georgia allotments in this manner under an old precedent.

Georgia delegation members on the whole have taken the position recently announced by Chairman MacDonald that there is little the federal bureau can do until the controversy over Governor Talmadge's ouster of State Treasurer Hamilton and State Comptroller Harrison is settled in the courts.

Wilburn's Letter.

The letter of Chairman Wilburn to the federal congressmen and senators follows:

"Attached hereto find copy of correspondence that went forward to Hon. Thomas H. MacDonald, chief, bureau of public roads, Washington, D. C., on April 2.

"You are, no doubt, familiar with the fact that the secretary-treasurer of the highway board was in Washington on March 23 and 24, at which time this board made a request, through the secretary-treasurer, that the federal funds for road work on projects under construction in Georgia be allowed to come forward checks to be made payable to the state highway board of Georgia. The board, as brought out by the secretary-treasurer at his conference with the officials of the bureau of public roads, is willing to finance the projects, paying the contractors as the work progresses on the date specified in their contracts provided they are assured that they will be reimbursed by the bureau of public roads. This does away entirely with the revolving fund or trust fund that was advanced by the bureau of public roads with which to make payment to the contractors. In this way, no funds will be paid to the state highway board of Georgia until the work is actually done on contracts let under the supervision of the bureau of public roads and the low bidder and award of the contract occurred in the bureau of public roads and the construction of the projects are under the direct supervision of representatives of the bureau of public roads stationed in each division, as well as other representatives working out of the district office of the bureau of public roads in Atlanta.

Funds Are Sought.

"Please understand that the state highway board of Georgia is asking that payment be made to them only after the work is done and checked by the federal engineers to see that the work is correctly done and the estimates are checked to see that they do not show anything that has not been passed upon and approved by the federal engineers and already paid for with state funds by this board.

"The contracts involved are contracts between the contractor and the state highway board of Georgia. The state highway board of Georgia has a written agreement on each contract with the bureau of public roads that payment will be made as the work progresses.

"Please contact the bureau of public roads at your very earliest convenience and insist on having federal aid reimbursement checks come forward immediately as above outlined."

KEY DEFENDS POLICE, HITS SCHOOL SYSTEM

Mayor Urges Governments' Merger; Describes Storm Area in Kiwanis Address

Description of storm-torn Gainesville, defense of the Atlanta police department and an exhortation of the Atlanta public school system yesterday before the Atlanta Kiwanis Club, during which the mayor urged merger of Atlanta and Fulton county governments.

The Atlanta club voted to dispatch $200 to the Gainesville organization to be used for relief purposes at the conclusion of the Key address.

Nagging of Police Chief Sturdivant by Atlanta newspapers and citizens was scored by Key and he promised to see that "it is stopped."

He praised the chief as one of the best officers the city has ever seen, and asserted "I told him to proceed with the Otley kidnapping case even though I knew he was out of the city, because I knew there was no body in the courthouse able to handle it."

He pointed to this as an argument in favor of merger. He hit The Constitution for attacks on Sturdivant.

Reviewing his defeats in a move to get city council to ask the county democratic executive committee to place the merger proposal on the ballot, Key said:

"Thank God, I'll get rid of 21 of them this fall."

This brought applause, and it also was taken to mean that he proposes to become a candidate to succeed himself in the fall primary.

"The merger is no new thing," he said. "It has been in the minds of the people for a long time. It has worked successfully in Denver, San Francisco, Baltimore and other places and would be a good thing for us, in my opinion. I'm not looking for any job. All I want to do is to perform a good public service."

"Atlanta schools are always looking for some way to spend money. They have 13 grades in Atlanta and only 11 in the county system, but county students are superior to those of the Atlanta school system. There are some fine things in the Atlanta school system, it looks like the board of education is just trying to find things to spend money for. There is a supervisor of pencil sharpeners, a supervisor of testing and guidance and many others."

Soft foods—not enough hard chewing—that's why gum troubles start—Switch TO IPANA AND MESSAGE today!

YOUR dentist is certainly not going to phone you every day and say: "Are you heeding the warning of 'pink tooth brush'? Did you massage your gums this morning?" He's your advisor—not your guardian!

"Pink tooth brush" is simply a warning but a warning that your dentist should interpret! See him. It can mean serious trouble and you best play safe. But usually it simply means that our modern soft foods haven't given your gums enough work to do—that they have grown flabby and tender—that they need the extra stimulation of Ipana Tooth Paste and massage.

Ipana plus massage has become a part of modern dental practice because Ipana is especially designed to benefit the gums as well as clean the teeth. Massage your gums with fingertip or brush every time you brush your teeth and you'll see why. Circulation quickens. Lazy tissue wakens. Your gums feel stronger and healthier. New firmness develops. And your teeth show a whiter, better looking sparkle.

Help your dentist to keep you from being a "dental cripple." Don't let your tooth brush show "pink." Firm gums and shining white teeth are vitally important to you. Switch to Ipana Tooth Paste and massage—and switch today!

U. S. Correspondent Rides Bomber, Watches Fascist Aerial Assault

Newman on Italo-Ethiopian Front Describes How Duce's Airmen Hurl Death Upon Frantic Tribesmen From the Skies.

By EDWARD J. NEIL.
GURA, ERTREAN AVIATION HEADQUARTERS, OF THE NORTHERN ITALIAN ARMY, April 7.—(AP)—From the glass-enclosed bombing pit of a huge tri-motored plane I saw today the amazing destruction Italian aviation is inflicting on the demoralized remnants of Emperor Haile Selassie's imperial army.

I flew for four and a half hours with an Italian bombing squadron. We sailed over Lakes Tana and Ashangi, the city of Gondar, and the outskirts of Dessie and saw how deeply the Italians have really penetrated into Ethiopia, in addition to what they do when they find from the air columns of Ethiopians and animals huddled despairingly along the caravan trails.

We had been flying half an hour from Gura when Captain Giovanni Dauria and Major Piero Ferretti at the dual control of an eight-ton Savoia low-winged bomber, holding two tons of explosives and a ton and a half of gasoline, through perfect skies over Addis Ababa and Aksum when the radio crackled.

"Bomb Quadrupeds," Sergeant Gentle Cesar brought a message from the scouting plane: "Bomb a column of Ethiopian quadrupeds in the river bed of Addis Ababa, near Addis."

Pink-cheeked Lieutenant Francesco Possentio, only 24, but the finest bombshot in the whole army, slipped down into the glass pit in the undercarriage and I went with him. We passed over the huge square of Amba Aradam and the spire of Mount Amba Alagi sticking into the sky over the tortuous terrain of the northern mountains, that from the air looked like the serrated brown backs of huge oyster shells.

We flew down the side of Lake Ashangi, where they were no signs of boats. On we went, over Quorom, past the first army corps encamped there. Three-quarters of the way to Dessie and two others of our squadron and three additional bombers following behind we found the valley of Uffiet and Aio.

Suddenly in the brown valley, luxuriant with vegetation, we saw strung out groups of perhaps 500 Ethiopians in dirty shammus and about 2,000 mules, horses and camels.

Ethiopian Frantic.
The sound of the swooping planes made the huddled groups try to hide their bulky animals behind the protection of trees. Our bombs fell and dove and thundered at them less than 600 feet from the ground, so close we could see the black men saving desperately at the reins of their mules while dark-colored camels stuck their long necks skyward, looking for the noise.

Then Francesco started pulling levers. We dropped 24 50-pound bombs, several pairs of 51-pounders in clusters and I saw at least 10 strike squarely in the middle of frantic groups.

The explosions were so terrific and we were so near that the plane rocked and through the clouds of smoke shattered bodies were easily visible flying through the air.

Piero radioed headquarters: "Found thousand quadrupeds at zone indicated. They received our caresses. Estimate 200 Ethiopians killed, 100 animals. Rest fled demoralized."

Flew the Plane.
Then we flew along the Dessie trail and saw native troops beyond Corbo. On the way back I thought it only fair to repay the thrills they had given me. Between the mixup of my jumbled Italian and their scanty English they understood I was an American pilot. Politely, over Makale, Piero invited me to the co-pilot's seat.

As soon as I was seated Giovanni motioned and smiled—"It's yours, take it!"

Not knowing what else to do, "I took it" and in the next 10 minutes piloted eight tons of bomber all over

DEMOCRATS PLANNING JEFFERSON DAY FETE

President Roosevelt Expected to Attend Dance in Baltimore April 13.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—Dining and dancing in the name of Jackson and Jefferson has been adopted by the democrats as a source of revenue.

Just finished with a nation-wide series of dinners in the name of Andrew Jackson which netted the party $270,000, plans have been worked out for setting the democrats of the nation to dancing to the memory of Thomas Jefferson on April 13.

The Jefferson Day festivities will center upon a master dance at the Fifth regiment armory in Baltimore which President Roosevelt will attend.

Just as in the case of the Jackson Day dinner, the President will deliver a speech, broadcast to the Jefferson Day dancers elsewhere.

But various side lines have been worked into the Jefferson Day festivities. The women will be clad in colonial costumes—an idea worked out by Mrs. Roosevelt.

For the costumes, patterns have been made and sold at a profit, just as are the tickets to the dances.

Mimeographed instructions on how to dance the Virginia reel and the minuet have been sent out.

The old-fashioned dance programs which will be distributed to the women arriving at the dances contain ink sketches of Thomas Jefferson, President Roosevelt and Postmaster General James A. Farley, along with a biography of Jefferson written by Charles G. Michelson, director of publicity for the national committee.

And with an eye to the fact that it is leap year as well as election year, to each program will be attached a wedding ring.

The Young Democratic Clubs of America, which is sponsoring the dances, has put forth a prediction that half a million persons will dance to colonial strains furnished by modern jazz orchestras.

Three judges will be selected for each dance to choose the most attractive colonial gown and to the winning woman will go an autographed picture of the President.

Most of the money taken in from the dances will go to the women's division of the democratic committee for its organizational work.

MRS. CHARLES A. EWING IS REPORTED SUICIDE

Wife of Real Estate Firm Executive Had Been in Ill Health.

Mrs. Charles A. Ewing, wife of the vice president of a large Atlanta real estate firm and socially prominent in this city, died shortly after 9:30 o'clock last night in St. Joseph's hospital, where she had been in the right temple.

Lieutenant A. T. Butler, of Fulton county police, who investigated, stated in his report that the shooting was a suicide. He added that he learned Mrs. Ewing had been in ill health.

Mrs. Ewing was the former Miss Mildred Kern, daughter of the late Frank P. Kern, president of the Southern Iron & Equipment Company. She had been married about 15 years.

Her mother, Mrs. May H. Kern, and her sister, Miss Frances Kern, were in the Ewing home at 36 Peachtree street when the shooting occurred at about 8:45 o'clock last night. They were in another room, however.

Immediately following the firing of the shot, a doctor who lives near by was called, and then an ambulance from a mortuary. Mrs. Ewing was taken to the hospital, but died shortly after being placed on an emergency operating table.

The bullet had passed completely through her head.

According to Lieutenant Butler, Mrs. Ewing had been in ill health for a number of years and had been dependent. She was the mother of two children, Charles and Ewing Jr., and Frank K. Ewing.

The body was taken to the mortuary of H. M. Patterson & Son. Funeral arrangements will be announced.

Cause of Tornadoes Is Unknown, Prediction Impossible—Mindling

Two and Possibly Three Such Storms Brought Destruction to Gainesville, Chief Meteorologist Here Says; Geographical Advantages Aid Atlanta.

By LAMAR Q. BALL.

"I have no doubt that two tornadoes struck Gainesville."

"Perhaps there were three."

"Such destruction could easily be traced to more than two."

Chief Meteorologist George W. Mindling, of the Atlanta weather bureau, put rhythm into his ABC's yesterday in his discussion of meteorology and severe holocausts that have disarranged the south within the last few days.

"Let us take, for instance, the tornado," said Mindling. "It is actually that spiral whirlpool in the air, the 'twister,' that so many persons insist is a cyclone."

"A cyclone is not that funnel-shaped combination of wind and cloud that persons have seen on the horizon, bouncing toward them and destroying men and objects as it skips on its way."

Cyclone Extensive.
"A cyclone is actually a rotary storm, spread over a wide area. Day after day, we have cyclones in the United States. It is a widespread disturbance and the force of the wind on the outer edge may be no more than 25 or 30 miles an hour. But it covers a vast area."

"A tornado is a violent local storm, of severe proportions, sometimes characterized by funnel-shaped clouds. It probably has a central core that extends down from the clouds. We have various evidences that the atmospheric pressure is exceedingly low at the center."

"We don't know how tornadoes start. All we know is that they disappear and they leave a horrible trail of devastation in their wake. But we do know that a tornado is not a cyclone. It will take thousands of years to determine from meteorological records the cause of the tornado."

"I am sure that Gainesville was struck by a tornado. I am sure that Tupelo was struck by a tornado. How often started, no one in the United States weather bureau knows. Our records are not complete. You can pore over yesterday's charts and those of the day before and the day before that and you will find nothing any one can give you the slightest clue as to the cause of the holocaust at Gainesville or Tupelo."

Cause Probe Difficult.
One great problem that the weather bureau has in probing the cause of tornadoes, Mindling says, is the simple fact that only an average of one acre out of 10,000 has been struck by a tornado. I am sure that the white man took over the country from the Indian."

"We can't tell just what starts a tornado, Mindling emphasized. "You must know everything you know about them is gathered from hearsay."

Take, for instance, Monday's wreckage from the clouds at Gainesville. "We have two telephones in this office," said Mindling. "Monday our telephone lines were cut. I am sure that indications of one of the worst panics I have ever experienced in Atlanta. There was no let-up all day. Every give we picked up the receiver the person on the other end was in a frenzy."

Fear of Death.
"All seemed in fear of death. One can hardly blame them when they are in fear of an indescribable and uncertain death. But, we tried to assure them that Atlanta was in no danger and none would believe us."

"All of us here in the morning until late at night trying to convince all our callers that there was no danger of Atlanta suffering from a disaster similar to that at Gainesville. But they closed the schools at Decatur. They sent the children home."

"They ordered the children in many of Atlanta's public schools to be prepared to jump for their lives."

"Someone—perhaps, two or three persons—telephoned the principal at the North Fulton High school to prepare for a certain tornado in Atlanta. Luckily, he was a judicious person. He was not panicked by these warnings. He telephoned us. We told him not to worry and our assurances seemed to satisfy him that he was not to be disturbed by anonymous telephone calls. The Fulton county system should be grateful for such a level-headed person in charge of one of its most important schools."

Geographical Advantages Aid.
Atlanta's geographical advantages have protected it from tornadoes in the past, Mindling said, and those geographical advantages will continue to aid the weather bureau in judging the tornado threat in the area. The city is built high on a cliff. The tornadoes usually start in a lowland or in an area that lies in a pocket

MARILYN MILLER, 38, SCREEN ACTRESS, DIES

Star Famous for Roles in 'Sally,' 'Sunny' Succumbs to Toxic Condition.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Marilyn Miller, vivacious blonde musical comedy star who the late Flo Ziegfeld once called the greatest box office attraction in the country, died in Doctors' hospital today after an illness of more than three weeks. She was in her 38th year.

Miss Miller, best known for her dancing and singing in "Sally," "Sunny," and "As Thousands Cheer," died as a result of an acute toxic condition that followed a long standing sinus infection.

With her at the end were her third husband, Chest O'Brien, an actor, and two sisters, Mrs. Ruth Sweeney and Mrs. Claire Montgomery.

Miss Miller, formerly the wife of the late Jack Pickford, brother of Mary Pickford, was born to the stage. Her parents were vaudeville performers and she joined the family song and dance team at the age of five.

Although "Who's Who in the Theatre" lists her birthplace as Findlay, Ohio, her secretary said tonight that she was born in Evansville, Ind., in September, 1898.

With her parents and two older sisters, she made her theatrical debut at Lakeside Park, Dayton, Ohio. Finding it difficult to obtain bookings because of the laws that restricted theatrical employment of children in this country, the family went abroad and toured foreign countries for a decade.

In 1920, at the age of 22, she attained stardom in "Sally," a Ziegfeld production.

After a three-year run, from 1920 to 1923, she broke with Ziegfeld over financial matters and went under the wings of the late Charles Dillingham, who produced her greatest success—"Sunny." Co-starred with her in that show was the late Jack Donaghy.

Her last starring show was "As Thousands Cheer," in which her third husband appeared as a chorus man. They were married on October 1, 1934.

PILOT AND CAMERAMAN HURT IN PLANE CRASH
GREENVILLE, S. C., April 7.—(AP)—James Millard, pilot, and A. E. Holland, cameraman, were injured when the airplane they were flying on a photographic mission to Gainesville, Ga., scene of a disastrous tornado, crashed in a muddy field near Simpsonville, 12 miles south of here today.

Millard, 25-year-old resident of Alexandria, Va., was the more seriously hurt. He was brought to a hospital here, where the extent of his injuries had not been determined tonight. Holland, whose home is in Washington, was treated for an eye injury, and discharged.

The pilot said he was forced to land by a shortage of fuel.

ATLANTA YOUTH SHOT IN QUARREL AT HOME
Ralph Williams, 22, was shot and slightly wounded with a single shot from a pistol shortly after 9 o'clock last night during an alleged quarrel at his home at 405 Arnold street, northeast.

J. Y. Guber Jr., 25, of 487 Moreland avenue, N. E., confessed to the shooting, according to police. He was held on a charge of suspicion.

Williams was admitted to Grady hospital. His condition was described as fair. His wife told detectives her husband and Guber were arguing prior to the shooting.

FLORIDA WPA HEAD.
ORLANDO, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—Federal works progress administration officials were asked by the Florida State Federation of Labor today to remove E. A. Fyncheon as state administrator. Fyncheon was charged in a resolution with discriminating against labor.

ROBERT F. BOLTON DIES AT HOME IN CHAMBLEE
Robert F. Bolton, long-time resident of Fulton county, died last night at his home in Chamblee. He was 84. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Guy Tully and Mrs. W. A. Ramsey, of Gainesville; two brothers, G. T. Bolton, of Washington, and H. J. Bolton, of Gainesville, and three grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by A. S. Turner.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—Mrs. L. W. Robert, wife of the former assistant secretary of the treasury, says she is going to have birthday parties for her horse as long as he is able to stand them.

A good portion of capital society, horse and many dogs were attracted to yesterday's celebration of the steed "John the Baptist."

Guests included: Mrs. Allyn Roosevelt Longworth, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, wife of the secretary of the democratic national committee.

MARILYN MILLER.

APPEAL TIME GRANTED.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 7.—(AP)—Federal District Judge John E. Martineau late today refused to give attorneys for Charles "Lucky" Luciano, under New York vice indictments, a direct appeal from his dismissal of habeas corpus proceedings, but granted them ten days in which to seek writs from the eighth United States circuit court of appeals. A plea for bail was denied.

Bickert, president of the Southeastern Underwriters' Association; and Eugene Harrington, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and a past president of the national association. ATHENS STUDENTS HEAR DR. WICKS Princeton Chapel Dean To Speak at Religious Conference.

ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—Men have to reckon with a basic urge to give their whole hearts to something, Dr. Robert R. Wicks, dean of the Princeton chapel, said at the University of Georgia's twelfth annual religious conference tonight.

"They easily take some part of life, near and expedient and comfortable, as though it were the final truth and supreme worth," he added.

"The business of contracting this habit, and bringing men to that which alone is worthy of the devotion of their whole nature, is the business of religion."

Dr. Wicks said that recognition of God as a persuasive power gives meaning to human personality. It is significant because it is the only medium through which this persuasive power can act in the world, and shows why humanity needs freedom, he added.

This morning Dr. Wicks told parents, ministers, alumni and church laymen, and faculty members and students, that today's students face a scared world where the forces of contention and domination are ascendant and where the Christian heritage seems to be in a stage of temporary eclipse.

"Religion has been in large part responsible for its own eclipse," Dr. Wicks said, "because it has been morally sentimental, dealing in generalities which failed to grapple with the fierce realities of our social life."

He added, however:

"But there is an emerging religious attitude appearing at the points where disillusionment is most acute. This religious attitude is more or less unconscious and unrecognized, but it is realistic and its facts and needs to be more generally appreciated."

RELIEF READY FOR NEEDY.
MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 7.—Ray Crowe, state WPA administrator, announced today that thousands of comforts and pairs of overalls were ready for shipment to the tornado-stricken areas of the south, and the flood areas of the east, middle west and south.

NORTH GEORGIA RIVERS REACH FLOOD STAGE

Peak at West Point Expected Today; Oconee Sets Record at Athens.

WEST POINT, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Flooded rivers of central and north Georgia crept higher tonight as tributaries added to their burden of overflow waters.

The Chattahoochee here reached 21.4 feet, two feet and a fraction above flood stage and the Weather Bureau predicted a crest of 23 feet, three feet under its previous forecast of anticipated 26-foot mark.

The revised prediction was made on reports from Franklin, Ga., which said the river there was out at a standstill. Lowlying sections of West Point were inundated and the Lanett-West Point highway was under water.

The business section here was free of water and traffic was being rerouted to Lanett by way of higher streets.

The Western Union Telegraph Company moved its office to a second floor room and announced all-night service would be given in view of the threatening situation.

The predicted high mark of 23 feet would keep the flood waters out of the business area. At 26 feet, the first flood stage figure looked for, stores, hotels and railroad stations would be flooded, with about three feet of water on Main street.

"We are all ready for it," said Stella Lanier, manager of the West Point Telephone Company who has been the unofficial watchman of the river here for 30 years. "It's the first time we haven't had a pouring rain. The merchants have their goods all packed up and moved to higher shelves. The only loss will be that of trade while the river is up."

Lanier and Mayor W. H. Scott both said they doubted that the river would reach the official level predicted.

Meanwhile, at Athens in northeast Georgia, B. G. Blison, veteran river man, said the Oconee was at the high-

STATE WATER SUPPLY STUDIED BY EXPERTS

Dr. Herty Is Principal Speaker at Waterworks Conference.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Need of definite information on the state's water supply in the program of the state to attract paper making plants was stressed today by Dr. Charles Herty in an address to the southeastern regional meeting of the American Waterworks Association.

Dr. Herty, Savannah scientist whose research in manufacture of paper from pine trees has attracted world-wide attention, spoke on the topic:

"The Quality and Fitness of Our Deep Well Water for the Manufacture of Pulp and White Paper From Slash Pine."

In his address, he appealed to the assembly for its co-operation in arranging for a definite source of facts on Georgia water, to encourage building in this section of paper plants. He said such plants would bring industrial prosperity to the south Atlantic coast region, and otherwise benefit the state.

Two themes occupied the association at the opening of its three-day session. Speakers urged that the state accomplish two things:

1. Co-operate with the United States Geological Survey and compile definite and reliable information as to what water supplies are available from surface streams.

2. Help make the people realize aridity wells should not run 24 hours a day, but should be controlled with faucets to be turned on only when water is needed; also stop the flow of abandoned wells.

The convention will continue through Thursday afternoon.

Waterworks experts, sanitary engineers and civil engineers from a number of states are in attendance.

J. W. Lovejoy, of Laurens, S. C., is chairman of the southeastern section. Other speakers include: A. Clinton Decker, Alabama director; A. J. Smalshof, of Columbus, Georgia director; W. W. Pointer, Mississippi director; J. T. Tolson, North Carolina director; and W. H. Weir, Atlanta, secretary-treasurer, and director on the board of the national association.

Charles F. Cole, of Richmond, Va.; R. R. Schweitzer, Norfolk, Va.; W. Smith, Georgia state geologist; A. N. Brown, Columbia, S. C.; E. E. Gibson, Charleston, S. C., were speakers on the afternoon program.

J. I. Connolly, Chicago; C. E. Boggs, Atlanta; L. H. Davis, Manchester, Pa.; B. B. Hunter, Pittsburgh; S. A. H. Smith, Atlanta; Guy White, Columbia, S. C.; Marshall Bright, Lyman, S. C.; Carl Alexander, Richmond, Va.; J. Jacob, Newnan; H. W. Schumpert, Newberry, Ga., are among a number of speakers and panel leaders on tomorrow's program. Officers will be elected tomorrow.

PRESIDENTIAL VOTE URGED IN CATOOSA

Date for County Election Is Set for May 6 by Committee.

RINGGOLD, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—The Catoosa county democratic executive committee has forwarded to the state committee chairman a request for a Georgia presidential preference primary.

The committee, headed by Earle McDaniels, has set May 6 as the date for the county primary election.

The resolution requesting a preference primary in part said: "The democratic executive committee of Catoosa county requests the state committee to hold a presidential preference primary in Georgia in accordance with the established rules and customs of the democratic party, and that a reasonable time be given candidates in which to qualify, and in event only one candidate should qualify, that such candidate be authorized and directed to name the delegates to the national democratic convention to be held in Philadelphia."

The resolutions were signed by Earle McDaniels, chairman; J. A. Ward, secretary, and C. A. Gray, Charles Hackett, C. C. Voeberg, J. B. Norvick and W. L. Cash, members of the Catoosa committee.

NEW SPRAYING SYSTEM IS SEEN FOR PECANS

ALBANY, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—A new system of spraying pecans for the control of scab has been developed at the United States plant laboratory here, and is being tested in the field.

Cole and J. R. Large, workers at the laboratory, said the cost of the new spray is small but that some type of power sprayer is needed for its application. They said pecan scab is one of the most costly diseases in pecan orchards in south Georgia and that they are finding the disease attacking orchards of nuts formerly considered immune.

The new system of spraying calls for four or five applications of Bordeaux mixture. The first application is made on the trees when the leaves are one-fourth to one-half grown, and that spray is made up in the proportion of two pounds copper sulphate, one-half pound hydrated lime and 50 gallons of water.

That is followed by three or four applications of a 3-1-50 Bordeaux mixture, three pounds copper sulphate and one pound lime to 50 gallons of water.

The first of these stronger sprays is put on as soon as the nuts are pollinated, and the other applications are put on at three or four-week intervals.

The sprays were tried out in test orchards here.

Contests for Four Offices Will Be Settled Upon That Date.

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga., April 7.—A runoff election for four offices in Gwinnett county will be held on April 14, it has been decided by the county executive committee.

Sheriff C. F. Griswell and J. P. Mason are the candidates for that office, while W. J. Phillips, incumbent, and Millard J. Arnold seek the tax collector's post. Treasurer J. W. Cogging is opposed by T. W. Wells, and in the coroner's race, Parks Pirkle, incumbent, has an opponent, Floyd A. Huff.

Candidates for county commissioner, with two to be elected are: F. Paul Dover, W. Grady Holt, W. R. Hurst, incumbent, and L. E. Strickland. T. L. Harris was elected commissioner in the primary last week and a runoff in his race was not necessary.

The runoff election is necessary because the high candidates did not poll a majority of the votes cast in the primary last week, the two high men being in the runoff.

BEER SELLER GUILTY OF SALES NEAR SCHOOL

$100 Fine Imposed; Appeal
Are Indicted.

Unless Roger Jennings, operator of a soft drink stand at 931 Boulevard, N. E., wins an appeal, he must pay a $100 fine in two cases or serve two years on the chain gang for selling beer too close to the Tech High school.

Jennings was accused specifically of violating that portion of the malt beverages act which prohibits such sales within 100 yards of school grounds or college campuses. A jury found him guilty, and Samuel Green Jr., his attorney, announced he will file an appeal.

Judge Jesse M. Wood, of the criminal court of Atlanta, presided at the trial and attaches of the office of John S. McClelland, solicitor, prosecuted the complaints.

Several other similar cases are pending, according to court records. Raymond W. Torras, engineer-secretary of the city planning commission, compiled a list of places licensed to sell beer and wines within the 100 yards of school grounds several weeks ago. City council ordered the list. It is anticipated that the entire group will be forced to close such places or be subjected to prosecution.

The Fulton county grand jury yesterday indicted two other operators operating near Junior street and Piedmont avenue for similar sales near the Tech High school.

Those indicted were Morris Israel, of the Teeny Weeny lunch room, and Raymond Beushuhuan, of the Piedmont delicatessen. The cases were transferred to Judge Wood's court for trial.

AD CLUB TO HEAR FIVE "VETERANS"

Origin of 'Truth in Advertising' Crusade To Be Described.

Dobbs and 30 other pioneers in a campaign for ethical paid publicity, at the luncheon of the Atlanta Advertising Club at 12:30 o'clock today at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

The speakers, among the group which accompanied Mr. Dobbs to Boston to launch the campaign, will reminisce on the "warlike days" of advertising. "The 'on to Boston committee,'" of which Martin P. Cannon is chairman, arranged the program.

Paul M. Reese will speak on "The Boston Convention Program of 1911"; George M. Kohn will outline the preparation made for launching the crusade; LeRoy Rodgers will recall the social life at the 1911 convention, and Louis D. Hicks will review highlights of the fight for the Atlanta delegation to the convention.

Today's meeting was planned to stimulate interest in the program to be urged by the Atlanta club at the convention to be held at Boston in June, according to James W. Petty Jr., president.

Mr. Dobbs, who as president of the Advertising Clubs of the World, launched the campaign 25 years ago, will be a guest. J. R. Roberts, past president, will conduct the program.

ATLANTA, GA., APRIL 8, 1936.

NEEDLESS DESTRUCTION

A timely moral from the disastrous floods in the north and west and the swollen condition of many southern rivers is drawn in a statement by Joseph C. Kircher, regional forester in charge of the southern region of the federal forest service.

Stressing the importance of reforestation as the best method of flood control, Mr. Kircher points out that while the south is "not a section of the country where the most destructive floods originate, large flood damage is caused from time to time . . . by the overflow of streams in the southern pine states ranging from North Carolina to Texas."

Atlantans now have an object lesson in this damage in the destruction being caused by the overflow of the streams in the area immediately surrounding the city. Adjacent to the city limits wide-spreading lakes have been formed by Peachtree, Nancy's, South river and other creeks. As a result of the downpours of the past few days, watercourses have made miniature lakes, not only of all low areas, but of large sections of outlying parks.

The Chattahoochee is over its banks, damaging highways, undermining bridges, marring the grounds of country homes and playing havoc with riverside farm lands.

Much of this damage and destruction could be eliminated if Americans gave the same attention to the vitally important matter of reforestation as do the people of other nations. Because nature has been so lavish in supplying us with trees, we have cut and destroyed until now we are having to pay the price.

Regional Forester Kircher points out that there are in the southern Appalachians more than 2,000,000 acres in protected and reforested national forest land which have, as he says—been a vital factor in checking floods in the rivers of Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and northern Alabama. Here we should have an additional 6,040,000 acres of land that would probably cost about $25,000,000.

If steps were taken at the present time to acquire this land, it would not only be of prime importance in our national obligation to take measures to minimize the recurrence of floods that menace the welfare and happiness of thousands of persons each year, but it would have immediate relief possibilities.

We must awaken from our indifference to the destruction of nature's protection from disastrous floods or in coming years the task of preventing destruction from raging watercourses will be many times as great.

AND THAT IS THAT!
Italy invaded Ethiopia, intent upon subjugating that backward country and taking any advantage it might derive thereby. Britain, having already acquired most of Africa by the same method, told Italy to stop her war of aggression, and tried in vain to get France to back her up in that demand; but France, afraid of Germany, stalled and quibbled, while Italy went straight ahead with her designs. Now Italian forces have hoisted their colors on the shores of Lake Tana, which Great Britain regards as her own special domain in Ethiopia, as Tana is the headwater of the Blue Nile, which supplies the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Egypt with water. Mussolini has offered many times to respect the British sphere of influence if Britain would cease opposition to Italy's "colonial" program. But Britain has been slow to respond.

Hitler tore up the treaty of Versailles and started to arm Germany. France raised a howl, but Great Britain looked the other way. Then Hitler put the Locarno pact in the wastebasket and moved troops into the demilitarized zone. France demanded he remove them at once; Hitler refused, and offered to join in a 25-year pact guaranteeing peace in western Europe.

Question for the students of international politics: What good will such a treaty be when Hitler gets ready to demand return of Germany's colonies?

Japan, having taken over Manchuria and created a puppet state renamed Manchukuo, continues to push on toward the west. Russia demands that these activities cease, but Japan keeps boring in. More of that later.

All of which demonstrates how imperative it is that the United States maintain its attitude of strict neutrality. Nothing would suit these nations better than to involve us in some way, and to have us "pull their chests out of the fire." But we burned our fingers once and will not do it again.

HEDGING ON ISSUES

Apparently heeding the oft-repeated assertion of some republican leaders that "you can't beat Frank Knox, Chicago publisher who is seeking the presidential nomination of that party, has eased up on former general denunciations of the New Deal and departed from the traditional republican 'high tariff' policy as a powerful stimulus to recovery, saying that a scientifically lowered tariff would greatly benefit both agriculture and industry and supply a much-needed prime to recovery.

The nation has not forgotten that a republican congress jammed through the Hawley-Smoot tariff law, which was signed by President Hoover on June 17, 1930. Declaring it would wreck havoc on our exports to foreign countries, the democrats fought the iniquitous measure to the last ditch, losing in the end, but their prediction came true.

The prohibitive rates acted to cause some 40 countries to retaliate to the extent that our foreign trade was seriously impaired, the value of our commodities and products became depressed, and our banking system was utterly demoralized.

Colonel Knox now recommends a "scientifically lowered tariff," and of course he would have it "scientifically lowered" by a republican congress. The voters of America are not disposed to trust a republican congress with "lowering" the tariff, and, besides, opening up the tariff problem on a wide basis would result in completely upsetting business and industry over a long period.

The present administration has in the reciprocal trade agreement measure a much better and still more "scientific" method of handling the tariff problem, and in the short time it has been in operation it has resulted in lifting discriminations against American products in several countries to the end that our foreign exports have made a gratifying increase.

Hedging some on his former New Deal fulminations, Colonel Knox said:

I shall confine myself to saying I believe the New Deal, if continued, will profoundly change our system of government. I believe the New Deal, if continued, will ruin us financially and economically in spite of our great wealth and natural resources.

The New Deal program contemplates only putting the nation back upon a firm economic foundation, from which it was shoved by republican policies.

There are parts of the New Deal which should not be abandoned, and under a democratic administration it is not likely they will be. Colonel Knox apparently coincides with this idea when he said:

As conditions change, laws must change with them; and our fundamental law, the constitution, provides ample means with which to accomplish this purpose. Certain of our laws, both state and federal, require modernization and adaptation to present-day needs.

With this statement most people will agree, and well-informed individuals must admit that the present administration is working to an end that will benefit the many and still work no hardship upon the few.

World's Window

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Is France Arming Germany?

Strange as this question may sound, the answer is curiously enough in the affirmative. If here Hitler felt strong enough on March 7 to defy the world, and the Locarno treaty to shreds and install himself on the Rhine with heavy artillery, monster tanks, mobile forts of steel and bombing planes, this is made possible by French mining trusts. Seventy-five per cent of the steel in Germany's artillery and other war material comes from France. Seventy-five per cent of the shells and bullets which are sent to French soldiers or the soldiers of nations allied with France in an eventual war with Germany are of French origin. The average of freight trains per day loaded with iron ore have left France in the years 1933, 1934 and 1935 for Germany. The rate of export is even higher in 1936. Germany has used 20,000,000 tons of iron ore since Hitler came to power to build up that gigantic war machine. Sixteen million tons were of French origin.

Mysteries of International Commerce.

The aerial torpedoes loaded with high explosives, cylinders containing poison gas with which Goering's flying squadrons stand loaded on the Rhine, and the very bombing machines themselves which now lie ready at the German air bases, are made out of material that comes out of French soil. Those giant Zeppelins which Herr Hitler is building at Friedrichshafen and which will be manufactured if France would not supply the bauxite which is an indispensable ingredient in the manufacture of aluminum.

When I went to the Rhine a week ago to see what I could see across the river, I noticed that traffic across the international bridge between Kehl and Strasbourg went on normally. I saw a string of trucks being examined at the French custom station before passing into the Reich. These trucks contained cotton waste, all this material is used to manufacture explosives. It has no other use.

Can This Traffic Be Stopped?

Can France stop this colossal export of war material which so seriously endangers the very life of the nation? This is the question that every thinking person must ask. France can stop the export of war materials to everybody, but not to the state exclusively. That would be an act of hostility, something like a sanction. Moreover, if France stopped exporting iron ore to Germany, Germany would retaliate and stop the export of Diesel motors with which the forts in the French defense line are equipped. Germany would stop exporting torpedoes with which the air force is equipped. German aviation are equipped and the magnetos which are indispensable in motor and synthetic nitrate and coal and some other indispensable raw materials.

An expert, M. Paul Allard, a distinguished French journalist, has figured out that of every two shells Germany fires off in the next war, one will be entirely made out of French products. It is terrible to think about the export of war materials to everybody, but not to the state exclusively. That would be an act of hostility, something like a sanction. Moreover, if France stopped exporting iron ore to Germany, Germany would retaliate and stop the export of Diesel motors with which the forts in the French defense line are equipped. Germany would stop exporting torpedoes with which the air force is equipped. German aviation are equipped and the magnetos which are indispensable in motor and synthetic nitrate and coal and some other indispensable raw materials.

Good Morning

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON.

WATER-GROUND MEAL.

I may be entirely mistaken about it, but I firmly believe that water-ground meal is better than meal ground by any other sort of power. I hope my good friends will not interpret my power business will not interpret this as an effort to advocate forgetfulness of the marvels of this day of electro motive force, not at all. I would not forget the fact that I have eaten some perfectly grand bread that was ground by rocks turned by steam power.

But there's something about this business of knowing that your corn was ground by water power that makes it taste mighty good, at least to me. A dear friend has just left my study. He brought a generous bag of water-ground meal from a north Georgia mill. I have been there. I have watched that beautiful stream of water, far up the mountain, as it fills that placid lake that feeds the big wheel which turns the water power and the big wheel turns the rocks that grind the corn into the soft, sweet meal. This meal here on my study table came from that mill. It smells like meal that has been ground on a water mill.

I suppose it dates back to my earliest memory when I would go with my father to the old, old mill, powered by water, would watch the mill before the gates were opened to start the mill, and then when the water did start rushing through the gates and the mill would spring into action, I would climb up on the wind-down and watch the picturesque old friend of my father as he would quietly and deliberately go through the routine of grinding the meal, the grinding hominy. I felt the vibration of the big rocks—I saw the foaming water rush from the wheel. It was all so grand. And then I would sit by the open fire in the kitchen and watch my mother make the bread, and she would say, "This is the way meal should be ground—water-ground meal—there, have a bite, my child!"

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

BY PAUL MALLON.

RECOVERY

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Treasury Secretary Morgenthau has a remarkable case of gripe improved progressively since the house tax hearing started an end. The manliness of the attack, which dispatched him to sunny Georgia just before the hearings started, likewise restored him to health and Washington the day they were scheduled to close.

The absence of the general during the formative stage of the battle has caused considerable comment among camp followers. They are making the natural mistake of suspecting that it is a personal matter, whereas it involves the whole strategy of the administration fight. Therein lies the explanation of what has happened so far and the promise of what is to come.

CAGEY More than one general has considered it wise to find out where the army is going before attempting to lead it there. This technique is especially advisable with armies as unruly as congress in a tax fight during a campaign year.

What happened was this: General Roosevelt and Morgenthau submitted the vague outlines of a corporation tax reform with astounding possibilities for soaking the rich and sharing the wealth.

They then sent a couple of vice-troopers, Colonel Oliphant and Helvering (and Captain McLeod), up to argue it out with the army while they went fishing, or curing the gripe, as the case may be.

In the interim, the details of the tax issue have been fought out. The vagaries of the original scheme have been snipped off. It is possible to see just what can be done.

A vigorous leadership for that can now be undertaken.

RESULTS A general understanding has been reached among the insiders that the final form of the bill will not carry any broad rich-soaking or wealth-sharing implications.

The corporation tax, they say, will strike only the few corporations which have more surpluses now than they will ever be able to use and the personal corporations which have been used for tax evasion.

Sufficient exemptions will be provided to enable corporations generally, big and little, to retire their debts and accumulate reasonable surpluses without an increase in existing taxation.

If that is not sufficiently guaranteed in the bill now being composed by the house committee, it will be provided in the senate. At least this is the promise now being made so generally on the inside that it has become a general expectation. Some skeptics will wait to wait until they see it.

It may mean a fairly good bill, although it will not raise anything like the $600,000,000 of additional revenue which the President demanded.

CONFESSION The increase proposed in the corporate tax reform has been concealed by the fact that the tax is being transferred from the corporation to the individual. That makes comparisons difficult.

Internal Revenue Commissioner Helvering let the cat out one day when he testified that the new proposed tax would be equivalent to a flat tax of 25 per cent on corporations. The average corporation income tax now, including the capital stock tax, is 16.4 per cent.

Thus corporation taxation under the proposed plan would have been boosted to a level higher than in Great Britain, supposedly the highest taxed nation in the world. In Great Britain the corporation tax is 22 per cent, a reduction from the high point of 25 per cent.

SHADOW-BOXING

No tax bill was ever considered under circumstances more unusual than this one. Not only the generals ran out on it. Even one of the colonels (Oliphant), the author of the original scheme, let innocent Helvering carry the load in appearing before the house committee.

Like a specific plan was submitted. The hearings were held before a bill was written, so the witnesses could not really know what they were talking about.

NOTES Old guardsmen who know say that, if Senator Borah had not gone into New York state in quest of delegates, he would have obtained at least half a dozen. Now he will not get any. The reason is that his quest became a campaign against the organization and the organization rallied.

The Black committee has plenty of personal enemies in the house, because it has put a number of house members needlessly on the spot. The rule giving the Black committee $10,000 for special counsel got out of the house rules committee only because two democrats refused to vote. Even then approbation was only by a 5-to-4 margin.

Father Coughlin has at least one congressional candidate in the field, Representative Moritz, of Pittsburgh. His platform is the 16 points of the National Union for Social Justice and the Townsend plan without the name Townsend.

Republican bigwigs nearly broke their necks trying to find out who planted that story about ex-Governor Lowden being made the keynoter for the convention. They do not want him.

"I'll be fun to meet 'em and find out if they're just as regular fellows, off stage, as were Caruso, Farrar, Gigh, Bori, Ponselle, Amato, Tibbett, Chaplin and all the others."

"Vodka" and Chaplin.

One of the classic stories of opera in Atlanta dates from the first visit of the great Russian, Feodor Chaliapin, made to this city. As customary, a party was given at the Hills club during opera week and, also as customary, all the stars were there and all were having a grand and joyous time. All except Chaliapin.

He was the newcomer, the stranger, and he was further handicapped by an extremely limited English vocabulary. An Atlanta man, seeing the big Russian housewife, apparently unhappy, decided to make the singer the object of his good deed for the day. So he went over to Chaliapin, pointed to the dark grounds beyond the radius of the revolving lights and, surreptitiously, indicated a flask in his hip pocket. (They were trying to enforce prohibition then, you remember.)

And, now the lady of delight of old is here in a stupor. "Vodka," he whispered.

Chaliapin grinned and followed. He drank deeply of the Georgia corn in the first, he conveyed the idea to get to the bar, and he wanted to do something in return for his new found friend. And, striking an attitude there on the edge of the first bar, he began "The Song of the Volga Boatmen."

And soon the entire party was out on the tee with the two, reveling in the Russian's magnificent voice, inspired by Georgia corn, under the soft glow of a Georgia moon.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

Proving they could take it. From The Constitution of Saturday, April 8, 1911:

"In spite of the fact that last year's horsemen netted a loss of about $5,000, the members of the association have decided to hold another show this coming fall. This decision was reached at a meeting of the association held last night in the chamber of commerce, J. H. Nunnally presiding."

And Fifty Years Ago.

The grand circle. From The Constitution of Thursday, April 8, 1886:

"A movement is on foot to extend the Boulevard east of Oakland cemetery, via Elise & Co.'s spinning mills, to Grant park. With this extension a grand circle of the most of the city would be made; out Washington street, through the city, to a fashionable drive of near six miles by one continuous line."

NIZAM'S RICHES

Customs of Hyderabad.

During the several days of Westbrook Pegler's return voyage from Europe his articles—FAIR ENOUGH—will be missing from this column.

WASHINGTON.—The Nizam of Hyderabad, in celebrating his silver jubilee, has reversed the birthday custom of accepting gifts from his subjects, he will shower gifts upon his people in the form of improvements in the state.

Hyderabad, heretofore, has not frequently disturbed travel book writers. The state has not changed much in decades. But before the turn of another, so many changes in the state will take place that the guidebook of today will be as useful as Miller's last year's spring list.

For the Nizam, one of the richest native potentates in India, is going to open his purse to clear ams from his subjects and towns, to reclaim land to build highways and to establish modern radio stations, says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

Rural Population. "Except for the usual shock of discovering Fifth avenue conveniences in medieval walled cities of mud and marble, travelers do not now find the state of Hyderabad very exciting. If there are in search of superlatives and oddities, they may be disappointed in seeing only a peaceful agricultural state about Italy's size. Here life progresses at the tempo of a quiet country town, for more than 14,000,000 people are farmers. Hyderabad City, the capital, is the largest native capital and the seventh largest in all India, a city of 200,000 people live in the 20,000 villages which dot the country with their green and yellow fringe of cultivated fields.

Through this land of tropical calm the Nizam dashes like a blinding comet, trailed by his retinue of several courtiers, officials, and servants. Whether he chooses to travel in a state coach of gold, or the 1927 model of 600 automobiles, or the private housecar, he passes constantly with steam up, his passage stirs a ripple of rumor and myth.

Land is All Rented. "In a land in times of flood or drought, when crops fail and famine stalks the land, the Nizam's government must calm the people's panic with farm loans, public works, and lowering of taxes. Even more terrifying is the coming of cholera, now growing rarer. Relief funds for the poor are in little danger of bankrupting the state, for government loans have been made at interest rates of 25 per cent!

"The Nizam's government is not owned by the farmers, but is rented from the government. The people of Hyderabad are widely different in religion, language, and customs. Four native dialects are in use, and so that the Nizam has announced that radio programs would be broadcast in four languages, English, Urdu, Hindi, and Mohammedan, for the Nizam is only a sprinkling of Christians, Jains, and Animists."

Caste System Prevails. "More rigidly than ever in medieval feudal Europe, the caste system prevails in modern India. The strict social lines divide the people into farmers, shepherds, traders, weavers, grain-carriers, liquor vendors, or housekeepers. The country is divided geographically as well as socially, although into fewer sections. The northern part, with its black rich soil, grows wheat and cotton. The south has a sandier surface, and specializes in rice. More than a fifth of the entire country is covered with forests, and the Nizam's government controls to supply the timber industry.

"All southern India depends upon Hyderabad for coal and cement, and cotton and oilseeds from the Nizam's dominions are exported in large quantities. Hyderabad is a great manufacturing center. Although several cotton mills are active, there is still woven on hand looms. The modern methods of silk production, different sections of the country turn out rare hand-made paper, embroideries with gold and silver threads, brocades, and silks. From the cocoons of a wild native silkworm, a durable silk cloth is made for scarfs, veils, and the native wrap-around dresses."

"The capital, Hyderabad City, is about halfway between Bombay and Madras. The journey from Bombay, by rail, automobile, or airplane, passes through Ajanta, whose famed monasteries were chiseled from the living rock of a mountainous dome many centuries ago, and through Elora, whose carved rock temples are similar wonders."

So He Dropped.

Two Scots were mountaineering in Switzerland, when one of them slipped and fell into a crevasse. The other, seeing his companion in peril, rushed to his aid, and, finding him hanging by his fingers, he pulled him up. "Are ye a' richt, Macpherson?" "No, exactly that," said the other, "but if ye run down to the village an' get a rope, I'll try to hang on till ye come back. Hurry, for heaven's sake."

His companion disappeared, and was gone nearly an hour. Suddenly he came back, again over the edge of the cliff.

"Are ye still there, Macpherson?" he called down.

"No, indeed. The dirty dogs in the village wanted two pounds for it."

Mother at 7.

A 7-year-old unmarried Mohammedan girl in 1932 gave birth to a living female child in Victoria Zennana hospital, Delhi, India. (The case is authenticated by Dr. Hilda Keane, the official obstetrician.) The mother weighed 48 pounds, the child 4 pounds 3 ounces. Both survived.

Rail Stock Sale.

The era of great railroad financing began in 1827. First subscription books opened for sale of shares of the Baltimore & Ohio railway, capitalized at $3,000,000.

Although railroads were as tried in the United States as rocket ships are today, the issue was over-subscribed, $4,178,000 divided among 22,000 subscribers—the largest number that had ever invested in an American enterprise.

ZAMORA IS EJECTED BY SPANISH CORTES

Leftists Win Sweeping Victory; Barrio Becomes Provisional President.

MADRID, April 7.—(UP)—Niceto Alcala Zamora was ousted from the presidency of the Spanish republic tonight when the cortes (parliament) overwhelmingly passed a popular front motion declaring the legally dissolved the last parliament.

The vote was 238 to 5.

Diego Martinez Barrio, speaker for parliament, automatically became temporary president and will serve until a new chief executive is elected.

Zamora was elected first president of the new Spanish republic on December 11, 1931, after the overthrow of King Alfonso XIII on April 14 of that year. Between April and December Zamora served as provisional president and guided the young revolutionary government.

The Spanish constitution empowers the chief executive to dissolve two parliaments during his tenure. Zamora, as first president, dissolved the constitutional parliament, which was established after overthrow of the monarchy. During last January he dissolved another parliament. This was just prior to the general election.

Popular front or left wing adherents won a sweeping victory. Zamora, a devout Catholic, was not in sympathy with the leftist policies and thus incurred their enmity.

Today's action was the equivalent of a left wing parliamentary revolt against the white-haired revolutionary leader.

The leftists contended that Zamora, in addition to dissolving the last parliament illegally, also had forfeited his power as chief executive and therefore was not eligible to guide the republic.

Zamora maintained he had not exhausted his dissolution privileges. He pointed out that the present parliament is only the second ordinary cortes of the republic and that the constitution, in granting him dissolution prerogatives, did not refer to the constituent cortes which he dissolved shortly after his election.

Oppositionists, however, claimed that the constituent cortes became an ordinary parliament when it undertook legislative work after approving the constitution. It was on that basis that the popular front was able to force Zamora out of office.

The action did not come as a surprise to the president. Before the vote was taken, he signed all documents awaiting his signature, closed his accounts at the presidential palace and summoned a notary public to take a sworn inventory of public funds at his disposal and the government furniture.

He then removed his personal effects and papers from the presidential palace to his residence.

RITTER IS DEFENDED BY EX-LAW PARTNER

cash and the lawyers by check because he did not want to embarrass the judge and himself and for the further reason that the banking situation in Miami in late 1929 was recalled "not recall."

Asked if Ritter had any advance knowledge of the agreement to divide the receivership fees, Rankin replied that there was a stipulation regarding the division by the directors of the property.

Rankin conceded he had reported only $20,000 in 1931 for income tax purposes of the $45,000 he received as his share of fees in the receivership of the Whitehall hotel at West Palm Beach.

He said he had made a "rough estimate" of his receipts in 1930, less portions of the fee shared with other attorneys—Walter S. Richardson, trustee in bankruptcy and later receiver, who received $25,000, and Ernest Metcalf, counsel for the receiver, who was paid $10,000.

Rankin previously had been allowed $15,000 in the case by Federal Judge Alexander Akerman at Tampa.

Decision Attacked.

He said he made the $20,000 return with the intention of later filing an amended return, but before he could do so a bill was filed attacking Judge Ritter's decision in the receivership.

When he repeated he made a "rough estimate in a hurry" of his 1930 income, Hobbs asked:

"Why did you make it so rough when you knew you had to swear to it?"

"What was that?" Rankin inquired. The question was not repeated, but Hobbs shot back:

"You never kept any books?"
"I never kept any books."

Asked if he had discussed the payment to Ritter with the judge, Rankin to which President Coolidge appointed him in February, 1929.

He said the discussion with Ritter was "casual," and the understanding was he was to pay the judge "as and when I could." He said Ritter knew he was "heavily in debt" at the time the partnership was dissolved.

To questions by Senator O'Mahoney, democratic, Wyoming, as to why he insisted on Judge Ritter handling the receivership appointment and fees, Rankin said "it was because I did not want to have any publicity on it until the receivership appointment."

He identified a letter, submitted by Hobbs, urging the clerk of the court to withhold publicity on the petition he had filed until the return of Ritter to his court.

"It wasn't immediacy of action you wanted," Hobbs inquired, "but immediacy of action by Judge Ritter."

"No," Rankin snapped, "it was not."

When Hobbs asked if other judges were not sitting then in southern Florida, the witness replied:

"I don't recall."

Robinson Protests.

Walsh, in his cross-examination brought a protest from Senator Robinson, democratic, Arkansas, for taking up so much time in trying to have the witness identify a document containing a long list of motions and other steps he and others had taken in the receivership proceeding.

Rankin was excused to look over the document tonight and be prepared for cross-examination again tomorrow.

The document, Walsh said, was intended to show that the work of counsel in connection with the Whitehall case had been extensive and not incidental and minor as contended by the prosecution in charging the fees were exorbitant.

Bert E. Holland, Boston attorney, testified under questioning by Representative Sumners, democratic, Texas, that after employing Rankin to file a foreclosure suit on behalf of holders of $50,000 of first mortgage bonds on the Whitehall, he went to Florida and dismissed Rankin and tried to get the proceedings stopped, but met with rebuffs by Ritter.

He said he told the court, with Ritter presiding, that he desired to take charge of the matter himself as co-trustee of the bondholders, that he did not want the matter in court and if it was already there he wanted it stopped.

Receiver Opposed.

"I believe the judge said we were already in court," he added, "that he knew the property and that he felt a receiver should be appointed to take charge. I said no receiver should be appointed because of the expense that would be incurred."

He said he thought Ritter replied "he didn't like the idea of people from outside coming into the courts in Florida and starting proceedings and then trying to have them dismissed."

In answer to a question later, Holland said he asked Rankin not to file the suit, after first requesting it be filed, because his associate, a Mr. Johnson, had informed him that while on a visit to the American Bond & Mortgage Company in Chicago he learned there were other properties that were having trouble, some of which were interested in.

He said he employed Rankin October 3, 1929, and sent a telegram to him seven days later not to file the suit.

Cross-Examined.

Cross-examined, Holland said he went to Chicago October 11 or 12 and while there a group left for New York to form a bondholders' committee.

"Was that the same day you told Rankin not to proceed?" asked Walsh.

"I think that was before I left Boston for Chicago."

"Did the $50,000 of bonds afterward go into control of the bondholders' committee formed in Chicago?"

"Later the bonds of the committee were deposited in Boston."

JURY COMPLETED FOR BEARD TRIAL

Prosecution Qualifies Jurors on Death Penalty, Defense on Insanity.

DALLAS, Texas, April 7.—(AP)—A jury was completed at noon today in the trial of Dwight Beard, 25, erstwhile college football player, wrestler and religious worker, who was indicted for murder in the slaying of a retired policeman here December 25, 1933.

Attorneys exhausted a special venire of 300 men in selecting eight jurors yesterday. A new venire was called today.

Beard, escaped life term from the North Carolina state penitentiary, also was charged in five cases of armed robbery here and five in Fort Worth.

He was accused of fatally wounding ex-Detective John Roberts during a hold-up at a garage here.

Jurors were qualified on the death penalty by the state and on insanity by the defense.

Defense attorneys Leo Larley and David Weinstein were allowed to take the accused man to a medical clinic for an x-ray skull examination yesterday.

They said they hoped to prove there was a pressure on Beard's brain, caused by football injuries or an automobile accident.

Examining the teeth of 11,000 girls at the University of California, dentists found only 400 with perfect teeth.

MEXICAN OFFICIALS PROBE TRAIN BOMBING

Attempt To Kill Political Heads Blamed for Bridge and Rail Blasts.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, April 7.—(AP)—A desperate criminal attempt to kill state of Vera Cruz political leaders was blamed by authorities tonight for the bombing of a railway bridge and wrecking of the Vera Cruz-Mexico City train which resulted in the death of at least 12 persons and injury to 15 others.

The politicians themselves were unharmed. Soldiers searched a wide area for the bombers.

A conclusion that political enemies of one or all of the three candidates for the gubernatorial nomination—Colonel Eduardo Hernandez, Chazaro, chief of the presidential staff of former President Pascual Ortiz Rubio; Ochoa Zamudio and Dr. Guillermo Padilla—plotted the attack was tentatively reached by authorities.

A search for other victims was continued tonight among the mass of twisted and charred steel where Pullman cars were plunged into a 40-foot ravine last night.

Victims identified included five passengers, five members of the train crew and two other employees of the British-operated railway. No foreigners were believed aboard.

Partially interrupted communications prevented announcement of a definite list of the dead, but official messages indicated the number would be much less than the 50 originally feared.

A detachment of troops commanded by General Heriberto Jara, in charge of the Vera Cruz zone, reported it wound in the wreckage definite evidence that the bombing was a carefully planned attempt to kill the politicians.

Tracing 300 yards of double wire from the bridge investigators found the apparatus which exploded the bomb by electricity, setting off the charge exactly between the first and second Pullman cars.

The engine, petroleum car, mail and express cars and the first two Pullmans plunged through the wrecked bridge 40 feet to the bottom of the ravine.

Remained on Track.

A third Pullman car, carrying the candidates, hung partly over the end of the bridge, sea-sawed momentarily but remained on the track.

The politicians and others immediately sprang from the car, drawing their pistols in anticipation of an attack, but the bombers fled after exploding the charge.

As the petroleum car crashed on top of the engine flames shot up and quickly enveloped the five wrecked cars.

The wooden Pullmans burned rapidly, cremating alive several passengers and trainmen trapped in the twisted wreckage.

Planes jumped from the ravine to the undestroyed cars above, burning the third Pullman and the first and second-class coaches, from which the travelers had escaped.

The Paso Grande bridge, scene of the attack, had been destroyed several times previously during revolutionary movements.

Special details of troops were ordered to guard the tracks of the Mexican Railway and of the Inter-Oceanic, which also runs trains between Vera Cruz and the capital, in order to prevent further attacks.

Discovered Bomb.

It was authoritatively learned that several narrow escapes from similar disasters have taken place in the past two weeks. The most recent was on the Inter-Oceanic a week ago when the train crew discovered a bomb on the tracks in time to avoid an explosion.

President Lazaro Cardenas, expressing concern over the bombing, personally asked General Jara for all information and instructed an immediate investigation to determine responsibility.

The train was proceeding slowly on the steeply winding route where the railroad begins to reach the capital, 7,500 feet above Vera Cruz.

A wrecking train was sent from Vera Cruz to Paso Del Macho to lift the twisted cars and facilitate the search for victims. The cars were plunged into a 40-foot ravine.

Two Pullmans caught fire immediately after the plunge, said a telegram from a Western Union linesman at the scene.

All passengers in those Pullmans, apparently about 40, were carbonized, he said. "The engine also was burned to death."

"One first-class car also fell into the ravine but apparently all passengers escaped."

AMATEUR WILL SEEK NEW PLANE RECORDS

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—H. Garrison Sillick, amateur flyer, said tonight he planned to try for new world speed and altitude records for amphibians with a single-motored Sikorsky plane within the next two weeks.

Sillick, who is a nephew of Jacob Ruppert and associated with Ruppert's brewing business, said he was making daily test hops from Floyd Bennett airport in preparation for the record attempts.

Dates for the tries depended upon weather conditions, he said. His uncle owns the plane. He planned to take his wife, a student pilot, as passenger.

Sillick's assault upon the international 1,000 kilometer speed record, set on February 10, 1935, at 99.95 miles per hour, will take him over a triangular course from Bennett field to Washington, D. C., thence to Norfolk Va., and back to New York.

Harry Richman, entertainer, and George Daufkitch, are joint holders of the present mark. Richman set the altitude record at 18,841 feet at Miami, Fla., on January 28, 1935. Sillick will try to better this in a flight from Bennett field, he said.

Havoc Caused by Civil War Battles Surpassed by Storm, Says Pioneer

(Editor's Note: The following graphic picture of Gainesville during its terrific tornado Monday was detailed for The Constitution by an 83-year-old Gainesville pioneer who has survived a number of major disasters which have stricken that city.)

By J. I. BELL.
GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 7.—In all my eighty-three and one-half years of life in Gainesville I have never seen anything so terrible as this tornado.

I was on my way to the main business section yesterday morning when the tornado struck and I saw it come down on the town like a blanket and sweep away nearly every store in the city.

It was a peculiar thing that I was standing in the path taken by the 1903 tornado, which I witnessed, when I saw the one yesterday. The air was damp and hot and long before the big wind came I knew we were in for trouble. I was nearly a mile from the center of the storm, but I felt it.

As soon as it had passed on toward the north I went, or rather tried to go, up to the square. The streets were blocked with bricks and timbers and I could not get all the way to the square immediately.

The scene I saw when I got there was so horrible that I cannot describe it. There is no way to give an adequate description of the damage and devastation done in Gainesville. One must see it to believe it possible.

In my opinion Gainesville will never be rebuilt anywhere near what it was. This thing has ruined our town.

With C. P. Furron at the wheel, and Mrs. Clarence Herring and Mrs. Allen Mason, all of Elberton, in attendance, the ambulance arrived at the hospital shortly after 9 o'clock.

In a few minutes, a baby girl was born. Mother and baby were reported as "doing well."

STORM VICTIMS BEGIN REHABILITATION WORK

Thursday, undertakers said in some cases where the entire family had been wiped out, no funeral arrangements had been made. The bodies of the victims were being kept in the homes of relatives and friends.

Meanwhile, rehabilitation work was well under way under the supervision of a half dozen relief and welfare agencies which co-ordinated their efforts.

Asks Financial Aid.

Governor Hugh L. White, who set in motion the immense program, returned to Jackson during the afternoon to further financial arrangements.

"The city's immediate needs, including clothing, shelter and food, have been cared for," the Governor said before departing, "giving us an opportunity to attack the great rehabilitation problem."

He left Adjutant General John A. O'Keefe in charge as his personal representative and arranged to keep in close contact with the situation.

From Washington came word that a $500,000 appropriation bill had been introduced in the senate by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, for rehabilitation work in stricken southern states.

Representative John Rankin, of Tupelo, advised authorities here that he believed the bill would be reported out of the senate banking committee favorably.

The Governor roughly estimated property loss at between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000. Included were nearly 1,000 homes completely demolished or badly damaged, schools, churches, power and communication lines, water and gas mains, automobiles, household and personal belongings.

WPA Official Arrives.

Wayne D. Allison, state WPA administrator, arrived during the afternoon to loosen the strings attached to WPA work.

The Federal Housing Administration was expected to relax its more stringent regulations to make the rebuilding program possible. To this end the Governor said he would turn his efforts immediately upon arriving in Jackson.

A soup kitchen was established during the day by John Wilson, St. Louis Red Cross disaster worker, who took charge of that agency's activities here.

All who called at the kitchen were cared for with no questions asked. "We are feeding and clothing all those who apply," Wilson said. "We have our field agents surveying the stricken area, not only in Tupelo but in the surrounding territory and soon hope to have a fairly accurate estimate of the immediate relief needs."

Needs Discussed.

These needs were discussed at a conference this morning attended by representatives of the various agencies, Governor White, General O'Keefe and city officials.

It was agreed that the work of rebuilding the battered homes should be done under the direction of a co-ordinated local agency to work in conjunction with the Federal Housing Administration.

Throughout the day CCG and WPA crews worked in the wreckage, clearing streets and sidewalks and carting away debris.

In response to the mayor's plea, Chancellor A. B. Butts, of the University of Mississippi, offered the facilities of the school's hospital. He said 35 or 40 beds were available.

The city continued under "military control" established yesterday by General O'Keefe.

U. S. Forces Marched.

The forces of the federal government were marshaled tonight in the rehabilitation program.

Plans were laid early tonight, at a meeting headed by United States Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, and State Director Wayne G. Allison for immediate rebuilding of the city's churches and schools, and 150 of the city's demolished homes.

The Resettlement Administration, with the approval of Director Rexford G. Tugwell, believed assured, will be asked to begin immediate construction of 50 homes for white persons, and 100 for negro families.

The Works Progress Administration, on the other hand, was prepared to proceed immediately with reconstruction of the city's schools and churches.

Final approval of plans for rebuilding public buildings with WPA funds supplementing local money will be awaited the arrival here tomorrow of Malcolm Miller, regional WPA director of New Orleans, and Ralph Langley, WPA supervising engineer.

Dr. Allison said, however, that he had been instructed to utilize the "full force" of the state WPA in "assisting these unfortunate people."

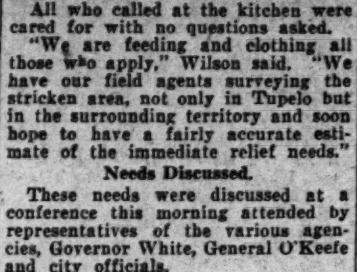

"That means money, clothing, food and labor," Senator Bilbo asserted.

The WPA already has a small army of workers engaged in clearing the storm wreckage from the city.

Dr. Allison said 1,500 men are at work here and "we are feeding 2,500 people."

The WPA chief said that Mr. Hopkins had been asked to authorize him to employ 1,000 homeless unemployed of Tupelo to assist in rehabilitation work.

Washington, D. C., April 7.—The appalling floods that swept over eastern states during the middle of March caused the American Red Cross to take under its care more than 100,000 families in 13 states, Pennsylvania was hardest hit, and in the cities of Pittsburgh and Johnstown the Red Cross either fed, sheltered or clothed 117,000 persons. The suffering was intense, because added to deluges of flood water, came rain, snow and intense cold.

11 PERSONS ARE KILLED WHEN PLANE CRASHES

Lighting apparatus permitted work to continue after dark.

Rescuers pried through a mass of wreckage to retrieve the bodies from the transport which ploughed through the heavy thicket, turned over and burned.

Three Escape Death.

Only three escaped death of the 14 who set out on the plane from New York to Pittsburgh this morning. Two of the survivors—Mrs. Meyer C. E. Leuten, wife of the mayor of Newark, N. J., and G. Challinor, of Cleveland, were carried away to the hospital at Uniontown.

Rescuers at first believed the surviving man was Stanley J. Beyerderfer, of Steubenville, Ohio, and the victim was not definitely identified as Challinor until several hours later at the hospital.

The other person saved is Miss Nellie H. Granger, the hostess-nurse aboard the plane, who although herself injured, stumbled to a farm house to telephone the first news of the disaster to her company offices.

Mrs. Ellenstein was in a critical condition, doctors at the hospital declared. They asserted she was suffering from shock, loss of blood and possible fracture of both legs.

Only a wing, a part of the fuselage and the tail of the plane remained after the fire burst out in its mid-section.

Search For Bodies.

State troopers, deputies and forest rangers joined in the search for the bodies.

From stories told by the few inhabitants of the sparsely settled region, officials believed the crash occurred about 9:30 o'clock (Atlanta time) this morning—only a few minutes after the plane went out its last wireless signals and then lapsed into silence.

The wreckage was found nearly three hours later by Harold Rankin, a mountain resident, after he found the hostess wandering about to seek help.

Alex Fredericks, a Uniontown newspaperman, who was one of the first to reach the scene, said: "The plane struck a ridge and clipped away three motors and the under carriage. They fell about 150 feet away."

"The tail was left intact but the front and wings were badly crumpled. Eight bodies were taken out. Apparently some bodies were burned."

Snowstorm Raging.

"There's a snowstorm raging and it's pitch dark."

"The electric company is sending emergency crews to set up lights so rescuers can go ahead with their work. Those who don't know their way are pretty apt to get lost if they try to climb the mountain tonight."

Mrs. Granger struggled through 200 yards of dense underbrush from the wrecked plane after the crash. She walked along a little-used lumber road and then turned to take the main trail.

There she met Rankin who took her to a neighbor's where she telephoned the news to her company's offices.

The dead, identified by the company's passenger list, were:

Arthur R. Evans, Pittsburgh.

Charles H. Smith, New Kensington, Pa.

D. V. August, Grove City, Pa.

Pilots Were Veterans.

The hostess-nurse had been employed by the air line only a few months. The pilots, Otto Ferguson and H. O. Lewis, both had been with the company four years.

Mrs. Granger determined to stay at the wreckage until help arrived. Later, she was spirited away by friends to Pittsburgh.

The plane nosed through the heavy fog with ice forming on its wings. Fellow aviators said the pilots were following a beam but had drifted far off their course.

Then came a crackling and the undercarriage hit a treetop. The plane bounced away. It struck other trees. Engines and undercarriage were torn off.

The nose and tail of the plane lay on the ground separated by many feet. It was impossible to tell immediately whether the fuselage crashed apart or first set on fire and disintegrated.

Charged mail bags lay between the two sections.

Doctors on Scene.

All available physicians and ambulances from Uniontown drove to the foot of the long trail up the mountain. The injured and the dead came down the steep hillside in wagons and trucks or on stretchers—some of them fashioned from broken parts of the plane.

The department of commerce in Washington ordered four inspectors to learn the cause of the wreck.

Joseph Anthony, Pittsburgh pilot, flew over the wreck scene after the fog began to lift. He said:

"The ship must have hit with tremendous force. It was completely wrecked."

Residents of the mountain district—known to pilots as "the graveyard of the Alleghenies"—said the plane struck just 200 feet below the forest-crowned mountain top.

The mountain—often shrouded in fog—is three miles from the Uniontown hotel—high spot in western Pennsylvania. Near by is Fort Necessity, site of Indian and Revolutionary War battles.

The region is densely wooded—a state forest is maintained near Fort Necessity. Below are the coal mines, the coke ovens and the farms of typical western Pennsylvania hill country.

FAULTY RADIO BEAM.

IS BLAMED FOR CRASH.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Officials of Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., said late today that reports from the plane which fell near Uniontown, Pa., killing 11 persons indicated that the radio beam no longer was functioning accurately.

The company promised an immediate investigation.

Miss N. H. Granger, surviving member of the crew, who was the first to report the exact conditions under which the plane was wrecked, a statement said.

"When last reporting its position, 10 miles east of the Pittsburgh airport, at 9:09 a. m., Atlanta time, Pilot Otto Ferguson said the radio equipment were in perfect working order. He was then flying at an altitude of 3,000 feet and was descending for a landing at Pittsburgh, scheduled destination, within a few minutes."

"A ceiling of 1,700 feet existed at Pittsburgh at the time."

"The crash occurred while the plane was approximately 30 miles south of Pittsburgh, off its course, indicating that the radio beam was no longer functioning accurately according to air line executives."

Officials of the airline give great credit to the wisdom of Miss Granger who walked four miles to the first available telephone to summons help. She waited for and then returned to the scene of the accident with the ambulance.

"TWA has been flying this route for five and a half years without accident."

'ALLEGHENIES' GRAVEYARD.

IS DREADED BY PILOTS

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 7.—(AP)—Pilots know and dread the "graveyard of the Alleghenies"—that lone, almost inaccessible region in which a huge Transcontinental and Western Air liner crashed today, killing 11 persons.

Its upper reaches are towering, forest-crowned mountain heights, fog-shrouded in summer, sheeted with freezing mist and sleet in winter and early spring.

Many pilots have crashed in its treacherous gullies, deep ravines and the tangled underbrush of mountain slopes in the central and western part of Pennsylvania.

Near the scene of today's crash is Fort Necessity, historic shrine of revolutionary and Indian battles. It is 30 miles off the regular New York-Cleveland air line.

Five miles away is the mining town of Fairchance. A few miles further is Uniontown, where the nearest emergency landing field is situated.

The plane crashed at a spot known as Dulany's Cave, long a lure to picnic parties.

It is located at the head of an almost perpendicular gully on the edge of a deep gully cut into the side of Chestnut ridge.

The summit, three miles away, is the highest point in western Pennsylvania. It is reached by only one main road, the National Pike, winding precariously through mountain ranges and deep forests.

GIRL WON AIR JOB OVER 2,000 OTHERS

KANSAS CITY, April 7.—(AP)—Twenty-two-year-old Nellie Granger, who stumbled into a farmhouse near Uniontown, Pa., today with wounds, 11 persons had been killed in a T. W. A. plane crash, was chosen from among 2,000 applicants as a flying hostess for the airline six months ago.

She and Pilot Otto Ferguson and Copilot H. C. Lewis, both of whom were killed, lived in Kansas City.

Mrs. Granger was one of 45 young women selected by the line as hostesses last December. Officials said her home was in Dravosburg, Pa. She trained at McKeesport, Pa.

Ferguson, veteran airlines pilot, flew to his death on his forty-second birthday. Airport crews at Indianapolis were planning a birthday party for him when word of the fatal crash reached them. He was a charter and sightseeing pilot here for 17 years before he joined T. W. A., four years ago.

Beside his widow, he is survived by two sons. His parents live at Iberia, Missouri.

Lewis, formerly with the army air corps, had been a transport pilot out of Kansas City a number of years. He came here from Columbus, Kan., where his parents lived. His widow and two children survive.

Father, Guy Lewis, was waiting on customers in his butcher shop when informed of his son's death.

SOCIAL CREDIT BANK PLANNED IN ALBERTA

EDMONTON, Alta., April 7.—(AP)—The Alberta legislature voted unanimously today to give Premier Brown's social credit government power to establish a provincial bank.

The approval of the administration proposal, which may be effected "as soon as may be convenient," came only a short time before the parliament body adjourned.

Development of our primary resources makes necessary method of insuring credit facilities," commented Provincial Treasurer Charles Cockroft during debate on the measure. "This is the method."

P. T. MOZLEY PASSES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

P. T. Mozley, long-time resident of College Park, died yesterday afternoon at his residence, 321 West Vista avenue, College Park, at the age of 85.

He had lived in College Park for more than 30 years and was a prominent member of the East Point Methodist church. He had been ill for some time.

He is survived by two daughters, the Misses Maude and Hettie Mozley; two sons, S. A. and H. L. Mozley; a granddaughter, Mrs. W. F. Derrington, and a great-grandchild.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by Harry G. Poole.

Tale of Stark Tragedy Revealed By Eyewitness to Airplane Crash

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 7.—(AP)—First eyewitnesses to reach the wreckage of the giant Transcontinental and Western Airplane that plunged into the side of Chestnut Ridge today brought back a tale of stark tragedy in the tangled underbrush of the wild Allegheny foothills.

High on the windswept crest of that ridge they found mangled bodies strewn in the twisted mass of wreckage of the Sun Racer.

Other bodies were missing—barred from view by the charred metal of the battered cabin.

Somehow the crumpled steel gird—bits of it scattered in the dense foliage of a wild mountain-side—told its own graphic story of the tragedy that had hurried from the sky.

The trees had sheared off a wing. Then the plane apparently bounded into the air and came to an end in the fury of its own flames.

The huge two-motored Douglas plane, hurtling on propeller, a distance of 100 feet and tossing the torn bodies of its hapless passengers into the underbrush.

First to learn of the tragedy was Harold Rankin, of Uniontown, who was walking through the muddy, silted-down wagon-trail that leads nearest the scene of today's crash.

"I saw a girl coming toward me," he said. "She wore a uniform. It was torn and stained. She stumbled as if she were carrying a heavy load. She was crying."

The girl was Nellie H. Granger, hostess of the ill-fated plane. Sobbing hysterically she told what happened. Ray, a pilot, crashed near the wreckage. Mrs. R. G. Addis, lived on the mountain, took the girl to his home where she telephoned details of the wreck to Pittsburgh and New York offices of the company.

Rankin went on: "I brushed through the thick underbrush and came upon the wreckage."

John Edward Ferguson, 12, sat silently by his mother, Mrs. Helen Ferguson, and pressed her hand.

Ferguson, and his children, Arthur, 5, and Jimmy, 3, asked, "Where's daddy?" when he did not return home on schedule.

"Not tonight—I'm sure he will be here tomorrow," said Mrs. Lewis, second wife of the pilot and bride of only a year. She wanted the help of Lewis' mother, Mrs. Guy Lewis, of Columbus, Kan., to break the news. Mrs. Guy Lewis was expected early tomorrow.

DEATH IS CHEATED BY AIR PASSENGER

CLEVELAND, April 7.—(AP)—Mrs. Cecelia Challinor was informed this afternoon that her husband, Charles G. Challinor, 33-year-old representative of the Palmer Beer Company, was one of 11 persons killed in an airline crash near Uniontown, Pa.

"I can't be true," it just can't be," she said.

The couple's two children, Rosalind, 13, and Jack, 12, cried on their mother's shoulders.

"Oh, how are they sure it's he?" Mrs. Challinor asked.

The telephone rang again. It was the office of the airline owning the plane. She broke down. The children became hysterical.

"It must be true now," they cried.

At 8:30 tonight the telephone rang again. It was Jack Moore, Mrs. Challinor's brother in Pittsburgh, with a message.

"Charles is alive! He's in the hospital at Uniontown; he's the hero, too!"

Doctors said his condition was fair.

But there was no cheer tonight in the home of Stanley J. Beyerderfer, Steubenville, Ohio, department store executive, first listed as a passenger ill in London hotel tonight. Another brother, David, was said to be at her bedside.

ITALY WILL RESPECT EGYPT WATER RIGHTS

ROME, April 7.—(AP)—Conversations to reassure Egypt that her water rights in the Lake Tana region in Ethiopia would be respected began today between Fulvio Sestini, Italian undersecretary of state, and the Egyptian minister.

An exchange of notes shortly was expected. Sestini's recent report reached the Tana area, where are the headwaters of the Blue Nile, furnishing much of the water supply for the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Egypt.

Sestini declared it "absolutely absurd" to believe that Italy proposes "wounding or even menacing Egypt."

The Italian undersecretary assured the Egyptian minister that Italy always ready to draw "friendly" and "loyal" relations and spirit of amity between the two countries.

CONNECTICUT HANGS KILLER OF PATROLMAN

WETHERFIELD, Conn., April 7.—(AP)—Connecticut ended its practice of executions by hanging today with the death of John Siemborski, slayer of a New Haven policeman.

Siemborski was the first convicted man to be hanged in this state in six years.

Electrocution will be the means of carrying out the extreme penalty for murder in the future.

Siemborski was convicted of killing Patrolman Walter Kosla in a running fight in New Haven March 6, 1935.

ROLLESTON REFUSES TO ABANDON HIS POST

Red Cross Vice Chairman Sticks After Hours of Labor.

Moreton Rolleston, first relief worker to reach Gainesville after the tornado hit there Monday and the man who headed all relief activities, the first day, even to sending the injured by train to Atlanta, returned to the Red Cross headquarters in the Volunteer building yesterday and continued working, even though he was exhausted from a day and night of service in the storm-torn city.

Rolleston is vice chairman of the Atlanta chapter of the Red Cross. He was chairman of the roll call campaign until that drive was abandoned as a result of the storm. It was he who headed all relief activities, the first day, even to sending the injured by train to Atlanta, returned to the Red Cross headquarters in the Volunteer building yesterday and continued working, even though he was exhausted from a day and night of service in the storm-torn city.

He reached Gainesville in about an hour and a half after the first building fell. He said yesterday that what he saw was a story of "horror, devastation, suffering, sacrifice and mercy."

"I left my car at the outskirts of the city and proceeded with the Red Cross flag for about 12 blocks, until I reached the Dixie Hunt hotel," he said. "Gainesville had within four minutes been reduced to a shambles as if it had been hit by a hundred modern bombers. Nevertheless, we immediately established headquarters at the Dixie Hunt and proceeded to work."

"What has been done since that time is a marvelous tribute to the American Legion, WPA, nurses, physicians, firemen, undertakers, policemen and hundreds of others who have worked and contributed funds."

"Relief centers have been established at the jail, First Methodist church, almshouse, a mill and a high school. Seriously injured victims are being sent by ambulance to Alto, a central depot for distribution of supplies, has been set up in the new post-office building. Water is coming in on trucks. Militia is keeping the curious out of the city. Many of the suffering have been, and will be, sent to Atlanta."

Although it is a horrible thing and will require days to find all the dead and also will require much aid from the public for rehabilitation, Carl Hunt, of the Red Cross at Washington, and many other relief officials, are doing a job of which they may be proud.

Supplies Needed.

Among the supplies most needed are tin buckets, cups, gloves and lighting equipment, according to Mr. Rolleston. He urged the curious not to attempt a trip to Gainesville, pointing out that motorists delay relief traffic. It is needless for laborers and others seeking employment as workmen to reconstruct buildings to go to Gainesville at present," he said.

"I would like to emphasize the necessity for additional funds and stress the value of immediate contributions," he said. "No one can say how much good may come from a contribution within the next few days. It may save a life; it is sure to relieve suffering. The public should do their part by donations that may help the relief workers who already are at the scene."

THE BANKS HAVE MONEY TO LEND!

Y—this bank and hundreds of others throughout the nation have money to lend millions of dollars to lend. That is the normal and natural function of a bank.

If you are a business man with a legitimate need for money, you should feel free to come to the bank and talk the matter over. The Citizens & Southern officers will welcome you; they will give you all the time necessary to go into every detail of your situation.

More than that—if the conditions of your business warrants it, the bank is justified in making a loan to you. Money is a commodity; it is there for two purposes—safe keeping for the depositor and safe lending by the bank to aid the business units of the city it serves.

I have discussed this situation thoroughly with the bank officers. They recognize that business men are confronted with many problems—some old some new. They are ready and willing to help in every way consistent with their primary obligation to thousands of depositors.

THE MAN-ON-THE-STREET

THE CITIZENS & SOUTHERN NATIONAL BANK

No Account Too Large...None Too Small

More than two years ago, in six short words, I emphasized the situation with respect to loans. Many business men and individuals have found that this was no empty statement—they got loans at our bank. May I again affirm that statement:

The Citizens & Southern HAS MONEY TO LEND. Moreover—good, sound credit will always be acceptable collateral at our bank, as it has been for nearly half a century. If the loan can be made, under the principles of sound banking, our bank will make it, at reasonable interest rates.

If you have a borrowing need—come to the bank.

STATES IN SOUTHEAST FACE FLOOD THREATS

Four Persons Lose Lives as Rivers Continue To Rise.

By the Associated Press.

Rain which the week-end tornadoes drove in torrents over the south sent creeks and rivers over the flood level last night and raised a new threat to life and property in half a dozen southern states.

Four persons have died in the swollen streams. An aged tourist couple drowned when their automobile skidded from a bridge into Sweetwater creek in east Tennessee, and a child playing near Neva, Tenn., tumbled into the raging waters of an ordinary peaceful stream and lost his life.

Near Boone, N. C., three-year old Betty Joe Mast drowned in swirling Crook creek.

Over both of the Carolinas, Georgia, Kentucky, Alabama and Tennessee thousands of lowland dwellers are homeless and hundreds of thousands of acres have been inundated.

The south's two great rivers—the Mississippi and its tributary the Tennessee—both are rising. For the fifth time this year the Chattanooga weather bureau issued a flood warning, predicting a Tennessee river crest of 36 to 37 feet here, 6 or 7 feet over flood stage.

Such a level once more will empty homes and close factories that are only now being restored to normal following the 37.1 foot flood of two weeks ago. The Ohio river hit 52 feet at Cairo, where it empties into the Mississippi. The crest is expected Friday.

Overflow from the Mississippi already has turned about thirty of their homes in the lowlands of west Tennessee, outside the levee-protected area. Other hundreds were homeless at Paducah, Ky.

While the Tennessee was falling at Florence, Ala., it was rising down stream at Savannah, Tenn., with a crest of 47 to 48 feet indicated for Wednesday. Already slightly above the 30-foot flood stage here it was rising today at the rate of two-tenths of a foot an hour. The Tennessee upstream from the mouth of the mountain feeders pushed the overloaded stream into lowlands about the city. Highways and railroads were inundated in South Carolina. The Southern railway suspended operations on a section of the line between Columbia and Greenville, and the Piedmont and Northern railway was temporarily closed between Anderson and Belton, S. C.

Seventeen highways in South Carolina and six in western North Carolina were closed.

In the Montgomery section of Alabama, the Coosa, Tallapoosa and Alabama rivers turned pastures and low cultivated fields into brown lakes. The Coosa was above flood stage from Rome, Ga., to Wetumpka, Ala., and all three rivers were expected to exceed danger points.

West Point, Ga., watched with apprehension the rise of the Chatahoochee river for which a crest of 26 feet, the level of the 1929 flood there, was predicted by tomorrow.

GEORGIA AND ALABAMA THREATENED BY FLOODS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 7.—(AP)—The Coosa, Tallapoosa and Alabama rivers, for the second time this year, were out of their banks tonight, inundating thousands of acres of low-lying farm lands in Alabama and Georgia.

The Etowah and Oostanaula created a crest of 32.2 feet at Rome, Ga., where they meet the Coosa, against a danger stage of 25 feet. The Coosa was at a "standstill" during the afternoon.

The Georgia Highway Department notified the Alabama Highway Commission the swollen Chatahoochee river had covered the Atlanta-Montgomery highway under two inches at Lanett and Lafayette, Ala.

SOLONS ARE ASKED FOR STORM RELIEF

Speaker Rivers Appeals to Representatives To Send $10 at Once.

ALBANY, Ga., April 7.—Speaker E. D. Rivers of the House of Representatives, who was in Gainesville yesterday when the tornado struck, yesterday called upon all members of the house to contribute $10 each to the Red Cross relief fund. Mr. Rivers asked that the donations be sent to Abit Nix, of Athens, state Red Cross chairman.

He sent the following message to the members of the house:

"Mrs. Rivers and I were in Gainesville at the time the storm struck there and worked personally for several hours trying to relieve those in distress. We have visited Cordele and other storm-stricken centers. You cannot imagine the terribly distressing conditions of these people in the Georgia storm area unless you could personally witness this disaster. If possible send at least $10 to Honorable Abit Nix, Georgia state chairman of the American Red Cross, Athens, Georgia, at the earliest possible moment."

DAMAGE COUNTED

HOLC Loans at Gainesville Protected by Insurance.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 7.—(AP) Frank Holden, state manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and seven field men were here today checking on the damage wrought to homes on which the federal government had made loans.

Holden said the corporation held loan notes on 123 houses in the city. He estimated 80 were damaged.

"All were covered by tornado insurance except a few on which loans were made in 1933, when the government didn't require this form of protection," Holden said, and added:

"I know those who had loans were glad to know they have this insurance. I doubt if many of them knew they had anything but a fire policy."

Gainesville Merchants Peddle Their Wares on Sidewalks as Rescue Agencies Help Tornado-Stricken City

Out on the sidewalk in front of what was once his store, J. M. Stone, grocer of tornado-flattened Gainesville, is peddling the remains of his stock of goods. Stone prided around among the fallen bricks and timber and rescued the display shown in this picture. The Gainesville citizens seem just as eager to buy as he is to sell. Gainesville's spirit is high in spite of its burden of grief.

Tragedy, Grim Humor Mingled In Freak Antics of Tornado

GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 7.—The wind wraped the sheet metal from roofs around telephone and light poles and trees miles from the center of the great damage in Gainesville.

A sedan automobile, which Sunday was used by family for an outing, was blown more than a quarter of a mile off a hilltop at New Holland. This machine, when it came to rest in a deep rut, was demolished. It looked as though it had been melted in a tremendous heat. The seats were gone, the upholstery had been torn loose from the inside and the radiator cap was missing.

A negro house was picked up by the twister and set down exactly on the top of the building next door. No one was injured in this freak incident.

All through the New Holland district, houses were blown off bases, shifted many feet, ripped apart and torn asunder. No chimneys remained standing in the wake of the tornado. Where the wind spared a dwelling, it took with it the brick construction.

Strangely enough, the old home residence of Colonel C. C. Sanders, Confederate hero, whose house was blown off its foundation, showed no effect of the wind with the exception of debris blown into the yard. In the edge of the storm's path, Sanders' home was not damaged, though houses on each side of it were wrecked.

Soft drinks used to satisfy the thirst of disaster-stricken residents and the workers were at a premium. Beer and wines were in demand as was corn liquor for thirsts of a different nature.

Headed by Captain H. A. Gilbert, the Fulton county fire department at Buckhead had a truck and four men working as compared with the devastation of yesterday's great blow.

Mrs. H. R. Sear and Mrs. Ernest Wood were seriously injured in the wreckage of Sear's home on Washington street. The chimney piled up in the room in which they were chatting broke Mrs. Sear's right leg and Mrs. Wood's back. Mrs. Sear was taken to Georgia Baptist hospital, Atlanta. Whereabouts of Mrs. Wood is not known.

W. M. Brice, a Gainesville newspaperman, recalled the tornado which would have been on June 3, 1902. Officials counted 107 dead at that time.

"I was 14 years old," Brice said, "but I remember that storm as well as if it were yesterday. But it was nothing as compared with the devastation of yesterday's great blow."

Brice said the former storm did most damage to residences, the Gainesville cotton mills and the Pacolet Manufacturing Company plant at New Holland. The Gainesville mill escaped all of yesterday's blow. The New Holland mill lost the top two stories of the main mill.

Some fine horses were shot today. They were in a stable in the tornado area. Several had broken legs, broken backs and other injuries.

Henry Walker, clerk in Goforth's Department Store, said he owes his life to an iron safe. Walker said he was standing in the rear of the store when the storm came. He made for the safe and dropped beside it as the roof caved in.

Luckily, Walker reported, there was a small passageway left in the debris to a window and he made his way to safety.

A huge burnt bell that hung in the belfry of the Hall county courthouse—destroyed almost entirely by the winds—was lifted about 300 yards and deposited in the yard of the home of Mrs. Nell M. Pope, mother of J. S. Pope, assistant managing editor of The Atlanta Journal. There were no casualties in the Pope home.

A woman, soon to become a mother, was taking a bath when the storm struck. She was killed.

The true spirit that prevailed in Gainesville was illustrated by the residents who were spared from death or injury. They crowded into the emergency headquarters set up by the Red Cross at the First Methodist church to make their own donations for the relief fund. Some brought cash, some checks, and others food and clothing.

Every person with dry shelter opened his home to his less fortunate neighbors. At one home 30 citizens were given milk, the only safe beverage on hand.

Doctors did a heroic service. In the emergency hospital room at the First Methodist church Sunday school, they worked in two groups, operating by flashlight. Nurses from all sections of the state plunged into their work and took turns with the patients requiring emergency treatments. Some doctors worked throughout the morning and afternoon and yielded their places reluctantly to recruits from Atlanta.

Like water peddlers from the far east, CCC boys distributed water brought in by truck. Thirsty citizens were given drinks at the curb. Many of them had been without water since last night.

Austin F. Dean, editor and proprietor of the Gainesville Eagle, weekly newspaper, was coming out of his office when the tornado struck. He suffered only a cut from flying glass. His plant was wrecked. His wife escaped from the Princeton hotel without serious injury.

Money could not buy food in Gainesville for several hours. One battered citizen, however, found a bakehouse with four pies still intact. He purchased them triumphantly, walked home a good mile and a half to feed his family.

A baby girl, born 10 minutes after the storm struck, was "doing well" today. Mrs. B. C. Daniel, wife of a physician, said the baby was born without medical attention and that the mother was recovering.

Among the family of John Burnett, which was wiped out, was a two-year-old baby. The tiny body was found six blocks away. The mother, still in bed, was carried several hundred yards and dashed to death.

Roy Stevenson, Chilopoe mill employee, got a bird's-eye view of the town from a mill window. "It appeared like a huge black rain falling down from the sky plucking things from the earth with a massive hand," he said.

Electric lights were again on Gainesville's square last night. Georgia Power linesmen strung a double row of bulbs completely around the square during the afternoon and national guardsmen ate their dinners with lights in the shadow of the Confederate memorial monument. The business section was patrolled by squads all last night.

Where rain hampered rescue workers Monday, dust hindered relief work yesterday. Clouds of it swept through the streets where men were removing debris, blinded their eyes and choked their mouths and nostrils.

Crushed particles of fallen plaster, crushed bricks and waste left in the wake of the storm were beaten by a constant stream of trucks hauling away the wreckage. A fresh breeze started in mid-afternoon.

The Gainesville News, scheduled to be published today, was the Paul Heister of the tornado with its last week's copy.

Bits of the newspaper were blown nearly 40 miles and residents of Tooclose surmised the great tragedy when they saw the torn pieces at their homes.

Albert Hardy, editor of The News, declared he would be able to print his paper Friday, although he will have only a four-page issue. He said he expected no advertising in the near future but was optimistic over the income in job printing work which he will receive when merchants begin to get new supplies of letterheads, bills, invoices, and other matter which is necessary to their business.

The Red Cross bedded more than 100 in the high school auditorium Monday night and a few there last night.

The homeless slept in chairs, wrapped in blankets and quilts sent in by relief organizations.

The majority of Gainesville's 4,000 homeless were cared for in better quarters last night. Residences throughout the city were thrown open to the sufferers and virtually all were comfortable for the time being.

The tornado was kind of J. D. Matthews, owner of the Matthews General Merchandise Store on the main square.

Although every other store in the four-block area was practically demolished, Matthews' goods were undamaged and yesterday were sitting on the shelves and counters almost as though no catastrophe had visited the north Georgia city.

Except for the windows and a part of the roof, this building suffered little. Matthews had crews of workmen repair the roof yesterday afternoon and the building will be open for business this morning.

This businessman, known for his kindness to others in times of stress, asserted he will dispense his goods where most needed until Gainesville is back on its feet.

"The cash doesn't matter," he said.

Gainesville's banks, the Gainesville National and the First National, found themselves in direct opposition in regards to financial policies yesterday.

The First National had its vaults open when the storm hit and was unable to close the vault doors Monday night, necessitating a unit of soldiers to guard the money supply.

The Gainesville National was caught with its safety vaults closed

Out of the muck and misery of stricken Gainesville, hidden grief is revealed hour by hour. Here we see persons who were stricken in the tornado, but who were quite sure they were not hurt "badly enough" to report to a hospital while others suffered intensely. Their miseries have overcome them, however, and here they are registering at the American Red Cross emergency clinic for medical attention and other aid. All these photos are by Kenneth Rogers.

Relatives See Cremated Bodies Removed From Trouser Factory

By GLENN RAMSEY.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 7.—(AP) Relatives with tear-stained eyes watched today as more charred bodies were removed from the tornado-crematorium at the Southern Bell plant of the Cooper Manufacturing Company, scene of the greatest loss of life in Gainesville's most devastating storm.

Forty-five bodies, identified only as the remains of women workers in the two-story building, are in a morgue. The superintendent of the factory, C. Mayne, said 125 persons reported for work there before the twister struck yesterday morning—only three were said to have escaped.

Terrifying Story Told.

A terrifying story was told of what took place at the plant. The three who escaped—youths working in the rear of the first story—spread the alarm that a storm was brewing.

The women rushed to the lone stairway in the front of the structure and sought to make their way to safety. The winds crashed a portion of the roof on them. They were caught and then another horror—fire—broke out in the stairway.

Not one of the bodies escaped the fury of the flames. Throughout yesterday, last night and today the fire burned. Convicts, volunteer workers and national guardsmen sought to recover what was left of more than a hundred human beings, alive and happy yesterday morning.

Many were stories went the rounds of the streets, wherever people gathered to discuss the catastrophe.

Great Love Recalled.

Home folks recalled the great love between two men—Guy Barrett and John Rogers—partners in the Pruett-Barrett Hardware Company.

Barrett and Rogers, friends of many years, were bachelors and lived in a beautiful home on the outskirts of the city. They were two of the most philanthropic men of the community.

As one resident expressed it, "I guess they would have preferred to die together as they did, they were so fond of each other."

Barrett and Rogers and five others were crushed and burned to death when the tornado ripped the four-story building in which the firm was located.

The only one to escape from this building was a red-headed youth about 17 years old named Head.

He was reported to have told friends he escaped by clinging to an iron safe and crouching near it as the falling timbers pinned the other men in the store near the small office. All were burned beyond recognition.

PANTS FIRM WORKERS LISTED BY KIDNAPERS

GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 7.—(AP) A partial list of those employed at the Cooper Manufacturing Company, which sustained the heaviest loss of life in yesterday's tornado, was submitted to the Associated Press today by C. Mayne, superintendent of the pants factory.

Mayne said the list was not complete due to the loss of company records in the fire which followed the destruction of the building.

Some of the bodies which have been removed have been identified, he said, but many of the bodies have been charred and mangled beyond recognition.

Mayne estimated there are about 50 or 60 bodies still in the ruins. The list, as submitted by Mayne, consisted mainly of women, as follows:

Modene Richardson, Benita Winkler, Langhett Wallace, Mrs. Glatz, Lulu West, E. E. Shaw, Lorene Wilson, Fanny Wayne, Lucille Sheri-

All wire communication being crippled, Gainesville's only direct contact with the outside world in the last few days has been via radio. Here we see William Carl Hunt, assistant manager of the American Red Cross, directing Operators W. F. Kennedy and H. J. Pierce, of Station WCHD (short-wave), to appeal for money to carry on work of relief and rehabilitation. Atlanta has responded with $45,000.

Messages Carried ON EMERGENCY LINES

Corps of Workers Rushed to Area To Handle Heavy Traffic.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 7.—With thousands of people all over the south worried concerning relatives and friends in Gainesville, telephone and telegraphic communications were established and maintained as rapidly as possible last night and today.

Mrs. Kathryn Byers, operator for the Southern Bell Company, was on duty for nearly 20 hours yesterday, and after a nap in the small hours this morning she came back again at her desk, putting in calls for relatives of Gainesville residents and sending out messengers to find persons here to answer calls.

Four outgoing wires were established early today by more than 125 Southern Bell men and they were in constant use. Lines of anxious people waited to notify their families of their safety or of their sorrow in the death of some loved one.

T. B. Baird, Georgia manager of the Southern Bell, was on the scene yesterday within three hours after the tornado struck, and personally directed the clearing away of tangled wires. New lines had to be strung and the cost of replacing damaged poles and lines will run into thousands of dollars, Baird said. He predicted it will be weeks before telephone communication is fully restored in Gainesville.

Western Union wires upturned were down, but this company maintained communication at the Southern depot. Postal Telegraph had its downtown office destroyed, but set up an emergency office last night.

Shattered radios sent in the Princeton hotel and at the First Methodist church tapped out streams of messages all last night and today.

Tin capped trees were a common sight as far as five miles south of Gainesville yesterday.

AUGUSTANS ASSISTING IN RELIEF CAMPAIGN

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7.—(AP) Meeting eagerly a Red Cross challenge to raise $5,000 for rehabilitation of victims of the Gainesville and Cordale tornado tragedies, Augusta tonight had subscribed $4,500 of that amount and discarded its quota, intent on sending every available penny to its storm-stricken sister city.

Tomorrow, 40 workers, who volunteered at a mass meeting of leading citizens in the city council chambers this afternoon, will meet to organize an immediate city-wide campaign with the object of proving the $5,000 quota an underestimate of the willingness of Augustans to help other Georgians in dire need.

Demographic Committee Is "Busted" But Glad Atlanta's city demographic committee is broke—busted.

The Gainesville tornado was blamed for it but committee members were not bitter as they voted the treasury down to its last dollar.

Press Winburn, secretary and treasurer, reported the committee had $23.17 more that $20 he sent at once to the Atlanta chapter, American Red Cross, to be used for relief in Gainesville.

Hardy, Gainesville newspaperman, chortled of seconds was no voiceless that it was impossible to know who even made the motion.

James T. Ozburn, committee chairman, put the question, and it was carried unanimously. So $1 is all that lies between the committee and bankruptcy or insolvency or something equally forbidding.

Mammoth Midnight All-Star Show For Relief To Be Staged Saturday

A galaxy of stage and radio stars, headed by Olsen and Johnson, famous comedians of the theater and radio world, and a special preview of a new feature film will be presented at 11:30 o'clock Saturday night at the Georgia theater in a mammoth midnight all-star show, the entire proceeds of which will be donated to the relief of the victims of the tornado disasters at Gainesville.

Included in the parade of stars, besides the famous comedians, will be a string cast of 50 persons, including the Roxy Theater girls, Marie Purl's "Say It With Ladies," 25 vaudeville stars and many of Atlanta's foremost radio stars, including the Singing Redheads and 30 Atlanta musicians.

The feature film has not yet been selected, but it will be one of the leading pictures of 1936. It was announced yesterday by E. E. Whitaker, city manager of Lucas & Jenkins.

The big show will run nearly three hours and actually will present two complete shows. Orchestra seats will be 75 cents and balcony seats 50 cents.

"Members of the theater world have always taken the lead in coming to the aid of disaster sufferers," said Whitaker yesterday, "and Atlanta entertainers are no different in this respect from members of the profession all over the world. We want to do our part and Atlantans who come to the midnight performance will be doing their part and seeing a splendid show besides."

The midnight show will bring one of the largest casts ever to be seen on one stage in Atlanta. It was said. The headlines who will appear are known throughout the United States as leaders in their respective fields.

The entire proceeds will be donated to the Atlanta chapter of the Red Cross and the funds will be used at once to procure badly needed foods and medicines.

CONVOYS OF TRUCKS TAKE SUPPLIES AS WORKERS AID RESTORING ORDER.

Convey after convey of trucks, loaded high with supplies most essential in Gainesville's emergency, is the answer of Miss Gay B. Shepperson, WPA administrator, to the pleas of the stricken town.

Late yesterday a check at Works Progress Administration headquarters in Atlanta showed that Miss Shepperson turned every resource of the administration over to the stricken city.

Miss Shepperson in person reached Gainesville shortly after noon Monday, a few hours after the homes had leveled the city. Working closely with the local officials, the national guard and the Red Cross, she summoned her entire staff of engineers to help the work of rescue and the clearing of the debris.

Then the actual relief started. Supplies dispatched.

Late yesterday the WPA had shipped into Gainesville more than 73,000 pounds of foodstuffs and 33,644 articles of clothing in addition to beds and bedding and medical supplies. The food included 33,000 pounds of fresh apples, 23,529 pounds of canned beef, 2,750 pounds of enriched oat cereal, 1,815 pounds of rolled oats, 4,267 pounds of flour, 1,655 pounds of dry skim milk, 3,959 pounds of canned vegetables and 1,000 pounds of fresh vegetables. Beddings and other articles sent included 372 blankets, 841 quilts, 550 coats, 301 dresses, 1,774 pillow cases, 910 sheets, 12,177 towels and six barrels of crockery.

The commodity distribution division of the Works Progress Administration has established a supply depot at the postoffice building in Gainesville to co-operate with local authorities and other agencies in the distribution of supplies, Miss Shepperson said. Any needy resident of Gainesville, however, can be established by local authorities, will be eligible for food, clothing and bedding. The 400 WPA workers in the Gainesville area will be supplied with food from the station. A rolling kitchen from the Augusta district was sent by the WPA forces.

Martin Porter, WPA regional engineer, who had been in Augusta inspecting flood conditions, hurried in to Gainesville to supervise WPA activities there. R. W. Williams, Matietta, WPA district director, is actively in charge of the WPA labor crews.

Miss Shepperson said Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, had authorized the use of WPA workers in clearing debris and wrecking damaged buildings which meant to the public safety. The workers will be kept on the job as long as needed, and every possible assistance will be rendered in the restoration. In addition to the work crews, supervisors and engineers, the administration has a force of nurses in the Gainesville area assisting in caring for the injured.

A survey of other sections of Hall county was under way Tuesday to ascertain what, if any, damage had been wrought by the storm, and to provide for any persons in remote sections of the county who may need relief.

Miss Shepperson said in all her experience in disaster relief work, the Gainesville storm was the most devastating in a concentrated area, of any coming under her observation.

BRENAU COLLEGE CLOSES CLASSES

School Will Reopen Next Tuesday If Situation Is Under Control.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 7.—Brenau College suspended school today by order of President H. J. Pearce and virtually all Brenau students left for their homes during the day.

Several hundred of the college's students during the morning and afternoon, bound for home or for cities nearby where they had relatives, were plentiful. The college has been closed since not seriously. Roofs were blown away on several dormitories and windows in every building were smashed.

Scores of homes of the fashionable school suffered, more than college buildings. A row of them were nearly wrecked, but the girls were reported hurt beyond bruises and contusions.

Said Miss Jean Capleman, freshman, of Winter Garden, Fla.: "Only 25 or 30 girls are left here this afternoon. Some have gone home to places as far as Hartford, Conn."

"I'm taking a train at 5 o'clock for Florida."

"I was in a hallway when the tornado came and though I was frightened out of my wits, I was not hurt at all. The girls were in the buildings and were not hurt from the wind. One girl was blown away and narrowly escaped being killed or injured."

Students were told Dr. Pearce to report for classes Tuesday of next week if the situation in Gainesville is under control by that time. The college was on the outskirts of the path of the storm.

TWENTY TONS OF FOOD DONATED BY FARMERS

While most folks slept, there was bustling activity early yesterday at the state farmers' market here.

Trucks rolled in with fruits, vegetables and other produce and local farmers busied themselves, arranging their wares for trade.

Over a loud-speaker the voice of Mercer Hadden, market manager, said: "Everybody has been an awful storm at Gainesville and they need food up there. Those of you who can and will, are asked to contribute something."

A few minutes later 20 tons of potatoes, tomatoes, cabbage, turnip greens, oranges, grapefruit, apples and other fruits and vegetables were on their way to Gainesville.

Heavy Wooden Desk Saves Newspaperman

GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 7.—A heavy wooden desk saved Albert Hardy, Gainesville newspaperman, from death or injury in the tornado.

Hardy was in the office of the Gainesville News when the great wind wiped out the business section. Hearing the thundering roar of the oncoming storm, Hardy lay down on the floor under his office desk.

A four-by-eight timber blew in through the front of the News office, whipped around in the room above Hardy's head. A 50-gallon metal drum sailed in a window and brought up against a wall in a corner.

Torn loose by the wind a door hit the desk and struck Hardy, but did not injure him seriously.

The front of the News was destroyed but little damage was done to the presses in the rear, although the roof was taken away.

Prominent Atlantans Take Part In Affairs at Georgia University

By Sally Forth.

THE popularity and ability of Atlanta girls enrolled at the University of Georgia at Athens was much in evidence several days ago when exactly half of the girls elected to the Women's Pan-Hellenic Council were discovered to be residents of this fair city. Among them is Edith Logue, who was chosen as president of the organization, which controls all activities of sororities on the campus.

Celeste Smith, who has long been prominent in Atlanta's sub-deb circle, has again proven her charm and ability by being selected as not only a member of the Pan-Hellenic Council, but by being elected president of the Phi Mu social sorority for the coming year. The other Phi Mu representative on the council is Marguerite Roddey, a former representative student at Washington Seminary, and one of the most attractive members of the younger Atlanta social contingent.

Alpha Omicron Pi chose as one of its representatives Virginia Bradshaw, of Atlanta, and Alpha Gamma Delta selected Mary Jo Stone and Nell White, both residents of the Gate City of the South. Margaret Johnson, of Atlanta, will represent Alpha Delta Pi, and others chosen are: Chi Omega, Catherine Atkinson and Margaret Jones, both of Savannah; Tri Delta, Doris Beasley, Glennville, and Louise King, Augusta; A. O. Pi, Irene Williams, of Savannah, and Delta Phi Epsilon, Esther Haskins, of Macon, and Hilda Harris, of Douglas.

Incidentally, further proof that beauty and brains are not so disconnected is the fact that Rae Neal, of Atlanta, who has been in the beauty section of the Georgia Pandora ever since she's been at the university, is among those listed on the dean's list for the spring quarter. Rae is very blonde and very lovely, and she is a member of many organizations on the campus, both social and scholastic.

THERE'S a certain well-known doctor in Atlanta who is known for his ability to say the right thing at the right time. But he slipped up the other night. He was a guest at a dinner party for two attractive visitors. When he took his leave he very graciously said good-night to one. Approaching another attractive-looking matron, he said: "And I do hope you'll be in town over Sunday, too." The point of the story is that the latter was almost his next door neighbor!

WHEN bigger and better fish tales are told, Sally will discount this one as second rate. Until then, and that time will not doubt be a long way off, she offers this as one of the best, yet most deplorable ones, she has had the sad sensation of hearing. For here's a tale that will bring the heart of even the most staunch unemotionalist, and the saddest part of all is that it's true.

It seems that Abner Calhoun wanted a country home away from the noise and the bustle of the city—just some secluded spot with a lake where he could fish to his heart's content. So Abner bought what he considered to be the ideal spot, lake and all. On Saturday he proudly took his wife, the former Katherine Lett, to view their new domain.

Upon their arrival, they went to gaze at the lake, which was bountifully stocked with fish. But imagine their horror upon reaching the scene to find the lake no longer in evidence. Discovering a deep hole and a broken dam, they found that the lake had washed away, and there wasn't even a fish carcass to alleviate their distress. A sympathetic countryman, who had watched the proceedings sauntered up to give his theory upon the startling disappearance. "It was a water spout, Mr. Calhoun," he explained. "A water spout took it clean up in the air, fish and all."

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON, World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

(Mr. Culbertson continues his reporting of a bridge game between two married couples, at which he acted as referee. He fines the players for their errors, according to degree.)

The explosion of the red haired Mrs. White over her last fine had left a surcharged atmosphere that I, at least, found uncomfortable. The others, however, were inured to these explosions. Mr. Black attempted to restore peace and good humor by remarking pseudo-playfully: "Why, O why, most gorgeous red hair he coupled with a hair trigger temper?"

"Which probably is a new high for 'gallantry,'" sneered his wife, "considering that you're totally color blind!" "Under the circumstances, he's lucky!" Mrs. White snapped.

"Now what does that mean?" Mrs. Black asked suspiciously.

"Ladies! Ladies!" said both husbands.

"Your deal, Mr. White," I said.

North, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

North East South West

Pass 1 spade 2 clubs 2 hearts

Pass 3 spades Pass 4 sp. (final bid)

Mrs. White evidently had trouble in restraining herself from doubling the final contract, but she probably remembered what had happened on her last penalty double. So she sighed heavily, and led the king of clubs.

shifted to a trump. Mrs. Black won

less. She had to lose a club and a diamond in addition to the two tricks already lost.

I mentally thanked my stars that this time I had to deal only with a blind.

"Very bad, Mrs. Black. You tied yourself in knots on that hand. All you had to do, after winning the first trump lead, was to lead either a heart or a club, preferably the former, since

Mrs. White might easily have had a six-card suit. The heart king then would have been established for a discard and you never could have lost more than two clubs and one heart. Five dollars, please!"

"You're quite sure," purred Mrs.

White, "that she didn't make a weeny-weeny $2.50 error?"

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

A Bath Oil That Reminds You of Resting on a Pillow of Pine Straw

(Poed by Binnie Barnes)

By MIGNON.

Perhaps you do not care about a perfumed bath. Perhaps you are not a throwback to the women of the old

Roman days, who did not consider they had had a bath unless it was perfumed. Well, I am afraid I am.

About the next best thing I can think of is the next best thing to a bath: a pillow of pine straw—is to have a perfectly scented pine bath.

An eastern manufacturer has brought out a pine bath oil which permits of this luxury. You shake a few drops into the bottom of the tub and then run the water into it. Personally

I cannot see the difference, but manufacturers tell you that you should never put the bath oil in after you have drawn your bath water. I think they have in mind that the hot water will break up the oil and distribute it more quickly if you do it the way

sell the oil they certainly would not tell you anything that did not improve upon your manner of using it, so you better follow their direction.

I did.

Bath oil always sounds a little extravagant, but you use such a few drops that I would not call it that at all.

If you want a real springtime bath, I would advise you to treat yourself to a bottle of this oil.

If you wish to know the name of the article mentioned above, and where it may be purchased, please Mignon at The Atlanta Constitution. Do not

which case enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

When Strong Will Meets Stubbornness There Is Trouble.

By FLORENCE LA GANKE.

Roger was anything but good-natured these days. Business was bad, collections were worse. On top of that the long sunless winter had sapped all his vitality. When he was tired he was unreasonable and stubborn. Lois had learned that a long time ago. At first she was hurt, but later she recognized his moods and because she was an adult, because she was a useless command, and in the majority of cases she found she could get results if she omitted commands.

Roger, irritated by his daughter's stubbornness, told her to go to a party, going to a party.

Lois, who was not a party girl, was reticent in some of her mother's discarded evening slippers commanded her to go. When she refused, he sent her to bed. Many tears and hard

front of Lois, Lois clapped her hands

and the child capered around until she gave up exhausted. The slippers had lost their interest for the time being. Ann said, surprisingly enough, a little later, as she sat looking at a picture book, "Mother, why didn't you tell me to stop the way Daddy

tried to get her way by stamping her foot and saying, "I won't." She gave in she was being kind to a tired person. But she could hurry and find something that she wanted to do because it was more fun, anyway, so she really came out ahead since she had her own way. Ann looked thoughtful and seemed to be thinking it out.

Miss Virginia Greene Weds Mr. Ison at Episcopal Service

The marriage of Miss Virginia Greene and Roswell Davis Ison was a quiet event of yesterday morning, taking place at 11 o'clock at St. Luke's Episcopal church with Dr. John Moore Walker, rector, officiating. The occasion assembled immediate members of the bride and groom's families and a few close friends.

Palms and baskets of Easter lilies provided a background for the bride. Seven-branched candelabra, holding gleaming white tapers, graced either side of the altar.

Miss Barbara Greene, the bride's sister, attended her as maid-of-honor, and was an attractive figure wearing a two-piece dress of British tan crepe. She wore accessories to match and her hat was of navy blue tulle.

The bride was accompanied to the altar by her father, G. M. Greene, by whom she was given in marriage. They were joined at the altar by the groom and his brother, Robert Ison.

Smart!

NEVER at a disadvantage, never breaks engagements, never declines dances (unless she wants to) and her spirits never seem to droop. A smart woman does not suffer needless pain certain days of every month. She has heard of Midol, tried it, and proved to her satisfaction and joy that Midol does relieve periodic pain and discomfort.

Must you suffer yourself, and save yourself, certain days of every month? Midol might give you back those days you have had to be so careful. You can get Midol in a trim little aluminum case at any drug store. It isn't a narcotic, so why not try it?

Mrs. Murdock Equeen Selected To Head Atlanta Junior League

Mrs. Murdock Equeen was elected president of the Atlanta Junior League for the coming year at the meeting of the League which was held yesterday afternoon at the Piedmont Driving Club, with Mrs. Henry Grady Jr. presiding. Elected to the board of directors were Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris Jr., first vice president; Mrs. Colquhoun Carter Jr., second vice president; Mrs. Howard Carter Jr., recording secretary; Mrs. Preston Stevens, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Reginald Fleet, treasurer. The five directors elected at the meeting include Mesdames Joe Cooper Jr., Edwin McCarty, John Outley Jr., Dan Conklin, and Francis Gilbert. The remaining members of the board will be appointed by the president in the fall.

Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris Jr. was elected as a delegate to the sixteenth annual conference of the Association of Junior Leagues which will be held in Richmond, Va., in May. The new president, Mrs. Equeen, will also attend the conference.

One of the principal reports of the afternoon was made by Mrs. Ralph Paris, placement chairman, who stated that 200 active members of the Junior League were now filling more than 350 regular jobs in the various welfare and community agencies of the city, and pointed out that the records of the individual members showed that under the placement system the members were serving in more agencies, devoting more hours of work and taking a more vital interest in community activities than under the hour system, previously employed by the League.

A discussion as to the adoption of the placement system in the by-laws, replacing the hour system, followed Mrs. Paris' report. Included in the 15 approved agencies in which Junior League members are now serving, according to Mrs. Paris' report, are the Child Welfare, Family Welfare, Scott's Rite hospital, Grady Hospital, Good Samaritan Clinic, Red Cross, Cornelia Moore Nursery, Girl Scouts, Osgood Sanders

Nursery, Rabun Gap Mountain school, Hillside Cottages and Carnegie Library. These activities are in addition to the work at Eggleston hospital, the main charity of the League, where more than 78 members are now active, and the work of the Arts and Interests, Marionette and Children's Plays committees, Scribblers and other group work done by the members.

The League voted at the meeting to devote to the forthcoming carnival a large number of carnival features had been arranged, including a midway, side shows, a floor show, specialty numbers and the presentation of many prizes, chief among which would be a trip to Bermuda for two and also a week-end trip to Sea Island.

Mrs. George F. Willis Jr., ticket chairman, announced that tickets were now on sale for the affair.

Mrs. W. G. Hamm won the dress which was offered as a prize in the thyroid clinic contest.

Other committee chairmen who reported at the meeting included Mrs. Francis Gilbert, prizes; Mrs. Charles Tiller, special attractions; Mrs. J. P. Garlington, decorations; and Mrs. William Ogden, advance chairman.

Tests of canned pineapple juice showed it to be a "good source of vitamins A and B, a fair source of vitamin C, and to contain a measurable quantity of vitamin G."

Scientists are investigating why the several varieties of soy bean, given different climate and soil, show a range of 12 to 26 per cent in oil and 28 to 54 per cent in protein.

One of the principal reports of the afternoon was made by Mrs. Ralph Paris, placement chairman, who stated that 200 active members of the Junior League were now filling more than 350 regular jobs in the various welfare and community agencies of the city, and pointed out that the records of the individual members showed that under the placement system the members were serving in more agencies, devoting more hours of work and taking a more vital interest in community activities than under the hour system, previously employed by the League.

A discussion as to the adoption of the placement system in the by-laws, replacing the hour system, followed Mrs. Paris' report. Included in the 15 approved agencies in which Junior League members are now serving, according to Mrs. Paris' report, are the Child Welfare, Family Welfare, Scott's Rite hospital, Grady Hospital, Good Samaritan Clinic, Red Cross, Cornelia Moore Nursery, Girl Scouts, Osgood Sanders

Nursery, Rabun Gap Mountain school, Hillside Cottages and Carnegie Library. These activities are in addition to the work at Eggleston hospital, the main charity of the League, where more than 78 members are now active, and the work of the Arts and Interests, Marionette and Children's Plays committees, Scribblers and other group work done by the members.

The League voted at the meeting to devote to the forthcoming carnival a large number of carnival features had been arranged, including a midway, side shows, a floor show, specialty numbers and the presentation of many prizes, chief among which would be a trip to Bermuda for two and also a week-end trip to Sea Island.

Mrs. George F. Willis Jr., ticket chairman, announced that tickets were now on sale for the affair.

Mrs. W. G. Hamm won the dress which was offered as a prize in the thyroid clinic contest.

Other committee chairmen who reported at the meeting included Mrs. Francis Gilbert, prizes; Mrs. Charles Tiller, special attractions; Mrs. J. P. Garlington, decorations; and Mrs. William Ogden, advance chairman.

Mrs. Murdock Equeen was elected president of the Atlanta Junior League for the coming year at the meeting of the League which was held yesterday afternoon at the Piedmont Driving Club, with Mrs. Henry Grady Jr. presiding.

Elected to the board of directors were Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris Jr., first vice president; Mrs. Colquhoun Carter Jr., second vice president; Mrs. Howard Carter Jr., recording secretary; Mrs. Preston Stevens, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Reginald Fleet, treasurer.

The five directors elected at the meeting include Mesdames Joe Cooper Jr., Edwin McCarty, John Outley Jr., Dan Conklin, and Francis Gilbert. The remaining members of the board will be appointed by the president in the fall.

Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris Jr. was elected as a delegate to the sixteenth annual conference of the Association of Junior Leagues which will be held in Richmond, Va., in May. The new president, Mrs. Equeen, will also attend the conference.

Chattanooga Lookouts Move Into Atlanta This Afternoon

The goad of ambition—That's the most potent medicine in sporting competition. And it explains a lot of things. It explains, among other things, why Bobby Jones would be making a mistake to try any sort of winter tournament play to put fiber back into his game.

The concentrative power is gone now. But having won all golf had to offer—having been a personal epoch in a world-wide game (they still are looking—and vainly—for another Jones)—he would have no ambition goading him on. He couldn't do it. Even if he wanted to. Which he doesn't. Horton Smith, who won at Augusta in the Masters' tournament on Monday with an amazing finish, picking up two strokes in the last five holes on a rain-washed course, admits the goad of ambition isn't as strong in him as it was in 1930 when he was the scourge of the courses, winning all the way.

Some of the keenness for the game is gone. But there remains his finely-tempered game and his great putting touch. (He ran a 40-foot putt 17 feet past the cup on the 17th green Monday and had to sink it to win. He did.)

Gene Sarazen said to me at Thomasville, weeks ago: "I'm going to try in three big tournaments—the Masters, the American and British opens. If I don't do well there I'm going to quit being serious about golf. It will mean the edge is gone from my ambition."

He's won most of golf's honors at least once. It's difficult for him to key himself to the old keen effort. He has some incentive this year—the old curiosity to see if he can whip himself into competition again.

"REVOLTA IN THE DESERT."

The best line of the Masters' golf tournament was spoken at the 18th green of Johnny Revolta's round on Saturday. Dr. William E. Campbell Jr. was standing by the green. Revolta's second shot landed in the wide expanse of sand in the bunker guarding the green.

As Revolta took his stance in the sand, Dr. Campbell sighed: "Ah, Revolta in the desert."

I think even the late Colonel Lawrence of Arabia would have liked that line.

Johnny Revolta, more than any of the younger professionals, has that goad of ambition.

There's a reason. Being the leading money winner last year was swell to him—the greatest thing in his life. Here's a boy still in his twenties who lived in a log cabin when he was a youngster—a log cabin on a farm. He was in a boarding

TONSILS REMOVED.

BOSTON, April 7.—(P)—The tonsils of Johnny March, Boston Red Sox pitcher, believed to be the cause of his ailing right arm, were removed today at St. Elizabeth's hospital.

CRACKERS LOSE LAST EXHIBITION TO PHILS, 9 TO 6

Johnny Hill, Alex Hooks Continue Fine Batting for Atlanta.

By Jack Troy.

The Fidelity Phils rapped off Bob Durham, the little round man, rather squarely yesterday to win the final Cracker exhibition, 9 to 6, in seven frigid innings at Ponce de Leon park.

Durham, who obviously did not extend himself—exposed as he was out on the pitching hill to the final blasts of a late spring—left the game after the fourth after the Fidelity Phils had accumulated 11 hits and eight runs.

This was enough to win and nobody seemed to care particularly, especially the 100 or so half-frozen fans who sat disconsolately in various and sundry parts of the gloomy grandstand.

Durham, who will pitch opening day, is in good condition. And he has plenty of stuff. But he wasn't showing off before the Fidelity Phils, who squawk louder than any two clubs in either league.

WILLIAMS WORKS. Almon Williams followed Durham on the mound and worked two innings. He yielded two hits and the final Philly run. Bill Schmidt was in there, and no fooling, in the final inning. He made short work of the Phils by fanning two and forcing the third to roll out to third base.

It has been a long time since a filly won a derby and, on the face of things, it will be a long time until the Philadelphia Phils come first under the wire in the National league race. You can't win by squawking to the umpire as Jimmy Wilson's noble athletes are prone to do. It was one way of keeping warm on a cold day, however.

CHIEF FUEL MOORE. Perhaps the best treat of the game came when Chief Fuel Moore, the Chickasaw Indian pitcher of the Phils, complained to Umpire Claude Bond that a pitch he threw surely was not a ball. Peck Hamel was up. On the next pitched ball, after the chief had finally quieted down, Hamel blasted a double to right center. This sort of cooled off the chief, who hunts game in the winter time with a bow and arrow.

Hamel also slammed a drive back through the box in the second. It came off the chief and was retrieved by Catcher Grace, who retired Hamel at first.

Johnny Hill, who was the day's batting star with two doubles and a single in three times up, drew a walk. Alex Hooks followed with the first of the two doubles he hit, driving in Hamel. Lipcomb popped out, but Eddie Moore, who played the full game in right, brought Hill home with a single to left. This was in the first.

Hooks tried to score on the play, but Watkins made a perfect throw to the plate to nail him.

HOOKS DOUBLES. The Crackers scored again in the third as Hill singled, Hooks doubled again, Harris walked, and Hill drove in. Harris walked, and Hill drove in.

The final three runs came in the sixth after Chattanooga had taken who had walked and Browne skied to short. Hamel was safe on Johnny Verge's error. Hill doubled, scoring Chattanooga and Hamel. Jim Gavin, hard-hitting second-string catcher, pinch-hitting for Al Williams, hit a double to right-center on the first pitched ball delivered by Kelleher, relief pitcher, scoring Hill.

Johnny Hill, of Douglasville, had a great day. He got three hits, scored three runs and handled five chances without error.

The Fidelity Phils did not get into the ball game until the third. But they were not long in making their presence known then.

Chief Moore and Chiorza singled in succession. Then Watkins found one of Durham's pitches to his liking and slammed it over the third row of signs in right, clearing the sacks.

The big inning of the game followed. It was in the fifth that the Phils battled completely around and scored five runs on five hits, two errors and a double steal.

Norris and Verges hit, Chief Moore walked, and Chiorza, Watkins and J. Moore hit. Watkins and Chiorza put on a double steal to add insult to injury.

The final Philly run came in the sixth on a triple by Camilli and a double by Haslin.

Calling 'Em Right With Bond---Here's What Fans Can't See

More than one fan—and that includes most of the probable 200 present at Ponce de Leon park yesterday—thought sure that Peck Hamel was out when he dashed home after Johnny Hill's double in the sixth. But above is the accurate picture of the situation. It was taken on the fly by George Cornett, of The Constitution photographic staff, who paced Hamel home. Hamel ducked under Catcher Grace's hand and tagged the plate with his left hand. Grace is shown holding the ball about eight inches above Hamel's shoulder. Umpire Claude Bond was exactly right in calling Hamel safe on the play. The Phils, who squawk like a nest of young robins yearning for a worm, kicked on the play, too.

PETRELS, MACON UNABLE TO PLAY

Oglethorpe Cards Cincinnati U., Florida Here, Anderson Says.

Oglethorpe's scheduled baseball game with the Macon Peaches at this afternoon has been cancelled due to weather conditions, Coach Frank Anderson announced last night. The game, a promotion of the Dublin Lions Club, was to have been a charity affair with 50 per cent of the proceeds going to the relief of storm victims. Coach Anderson expressed his appreciation for the Petrels having extended the invitation to play at Dublin and was regretful that the game could not be played.

University of Cincinnati will invade Hermange field on April 11 to oppose the Petrels, Anderson said, and Florida will be met at Ponce de Leon the following Friday and Saturday.

At a recent meeting of Oglethorpe alumni, Frank Anderson Jr. was elected president. A meeting of the alumni has been scheduled for Devision's April 11 at 12:30 and from this confab, Oglethorpe men will go to the game with Cincinnati University.

Campbell, Goodman Top Amateur Ranks

Yates, Emery Also Rate Among Big Four To Succeed Lawson Little.

By Alan Gould.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—In this year's race for amateur golfing honors, yielded by Lawson Little Jr., after a two-year winning streak at home and abroad, the railbirds figure Seattle's brilliant young Albert (Scotty) Campbell to set the pace, with Omaha's Johnny Goodman the outstanding challenger.

A poll of players and newspapermen by the Associated Press, following the stormy battle of Augusta, today revealed Campbell a slight choice over Goodman, 14 to 11, with Walter Emery, of Oklahoma, runner-up to Little last year in the national amateur, and Charlie Yates, of Atlanta, the western amateur titleholder, as other members of a prospective "big four" nucleus for America's Walker cup team this year.

Campbell dashed out in front in the tournament test here, which marked Little's debut as a professional. Scotty shot a 68 on his third round, finished as low amateur with 302 and led Goodman, a former national open champion, by 13 strokes. Yates scored 307, Bobby Biegel, of Richmond, southern amateur champion and only other semi-pure to finish, scored 319.

CROSETTI'S NOSE BROKEN BY FOUL

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 7.—(P) Frank Crosetti, veteran Yankee shortstop, joined the growing New York hospital list today when he was badly injured during the batting practice preceding the exhibition game with the Louisville club of the Southern association.

Crosetti was hit on the left side of the face by a foul tip off Tony Lazzeri's bat. The winning ball struck Crosetti partly on the nose and the left eye, knocking him to the ground.

After first aid treatment by Doc Palmer, Yankee trainer, the shortstop was taken to a local hospital for a more complete examination.

Whatever the examination reveals, Manager Joe McCarthy ordered Crosetti sent back to New York tonight together with Pat Malone, veteran hurler, who was stricken with an attack of acute tonsillitis at Nashville yesterday. Joe Dinagrio, sensational rookie outfielder, already is in New York recovering from an injured foot.

AMBERS WINS.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(P)—Lawrence Amberg, of Herkimer, N. Y., leading contender for Tony Cannon's lightweight crown, tonight outpointed Pete Mascia, of New York, in the feature six-round bout at the Broadway arena. Ambers weighed 135, Mascia 130 3-4.

Tech Track Team To Enter Relays

Georgia Tech's track team, facing one of its brightest seasons in years, with Perley Walker back in competition, has tentatively entered the 42nd annual University of Pennsylvania relay carnival, to be held April 24 and 25 on Franklin field.

One of the largest entry lists from the south in years is expected for the carnival.

ENGEL FORCES TO DRILL HERE FOR TWO DAYS

Eddie Moore May Open for Crackers in Right Field Saturday.

By Jack Troy.

With flood waters covering their fields as the excuse, the Chattanooga Lookouts will advance on the enemy's camp this afternoon.

The word from Chattanooga last night was that the Lookouts had cancelled their last two exhibition games because of high water, and would depart for Atlanta this afternoon. Joe Engel's band of restless rebels will work out at home this morning.

The move is very logical on the face of it, but we rather suspect the fine Italian hand of Joe Engel is behind it.

DISTURB CRACKERS? He figures maybe that the proximity of his Lookouts will disturb the champion Crackers. But such, indeed, is not the case. The Crackers will welcome such an early visit. For they want the Lookouts to enjoy themselves at least two of the four days they will be here.

The Lookouts of Clyde Milan will practice at Ponce de Leon Thursday and Friday. They'll probably work in the afternoon, with the Crackers going through their paces in the morning.

The spot Cracker news of the day is that Manager Eddie Moore, who played the full seven innings in right against the Phils yesterday, will start Saturday's opener if Russ Cohen, a left-hander, is used as the starting pitcher.

HOWEVER—If Alex McColl pitches, as Manager Milan has intimated he will, Alameda Al Browne will play in right. Browne is a left-handed hitter, of course.

Manager Moore may start the game, anyway. For it will be recalled that last year, Johnny Hill's first year out in Southern league ball, Moore started at third. It sort of relieved the pressure of an opening-day appearance for Hill, who went on to play great ball all season.

It may be that Moore will do the same thing for Browne, who is a fine young prospect.

Four former Crackers will accompany the Lookouts here. They are Fred Sington, Taft Wright, Andy Messenger and Harry Taylor.

Lookouts Pull A Triple Play

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 7.

(P)—The Chattanooga Lookouts' last-inning infield registered a triple play today while taking an 11-3 battering from the Boston Red Sox.

Bob (Lefty) Grove worked seven innings, giving the Lookouts six hits, passing three and striking out three. The Sox collected 19 hits, most of them off Alex McColl, 42-year-old veteran.

Governor Talmadge Will Miss Opener

By the Associated Press.

Governor Eugene Talmadge will not put on his annual baseball club-swinging act.

The Georgia executive said a previous engagement will prevent him from taking part in the opening Southern association game here Saturday between Atlanta and Chattanooga.

"I am sorry I cannot hit the first ball pitched, but I will not be in town. However, I will be pulling for the Crackers and hope to see a lot of games this summer."

Grant Retains River Oaks Title With Four-Set Victory

ALLEISON FAILS TO WIN A GAME IN FOURTH SET

Bitzy Also Takes Six Straight Games in First Set.

HOUSTON, Texas, April 7.—(AP)—Bryant "Bitzy" Grant, fighting to convince Captain Wilmer Allison, of the American Davis cup team, that he deserves the No. 1 singles spot on the squad, defeated Allison here this afternoon to win the River Oaks tennis tournament championship.

Playing brilliantly, Allison's mighty mite gained a 6-1, 4-6, 6-4, 6-0 decision over Allison, the national champion.

Grant thus became the first player to win the River Oaks tournament twice in succession. His victory was almost a repetition of his last year's conquest, when he defeated Allison in the final.

TOP FORM. Allison was in top form in the second and third sets, but his best was not good enough. Four times in the final game of the third set, Allison needed only one point to win the game, but the Georgian would not yield and finally took the set when Allison double faulted.

Grant had expressed a hope that he would draw the top singles berth for the United States-Mexico first round Davis cup zone matches at River Oaks this week-end. Captain Allison had indicated he would play only in the doubles against Mexico.

Captain Allison said he would not decide definitely on his lineup against the Mexicans until after he had observed Budge in singles play. He previously had indicated Grant and Budge would play the four singles matches and that he would compete only in the doubles, with John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, as his partner.

PRaises Bitzy. The Texan praised Grant's great play today.

"But Bitzy always plays well," he added. "He's so steady that it's just like hitting against the backboard."

Members of the Mexican Davis team were interested spectators. They admitted they could find few weaknesses in Grant's play. Two of them face the unpleasant prospect of meeting the Georgian in singles matches Friday and Sunday.

Allison held an edge in service and net play during the second and third sets, but Grant's superb volleying kept him on even terms.

SUMMER PLAYER. Allison, who hardly ever performs at his best until summer, broke even in two matches in his last year.

Both were played in April.

Don Budge and Gene Mako, spectacular young Californians, completed their tournament play without losing a set as they conquered the Davis cup combination of Allison and John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, in the doubles final, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3.

Allison was tired as a result of his long singles match, but it is doubtful if he and his partner could have matched the strokes of their youthful opponents even if he had been fresh.

Allison and Van Ryn were ranked No. 1 in the nation last year with Budge and Mako just behind them.

S.S.A.A. FIVES PLAY FOR TITLE

Central Baptist JOY Class and Central Presbyterian will meet at Calvary court tonight at 9:30 o'clock in the final game of a series for the basketball championship of the Sunday School Amateur Athletic Association. The court is located on Gordon street in West End.

The teams will enter the game on even terms, each having won a game in the playoff. JOY Class took the first and Central Presbyterian came back to win the second. The Presbyterians have been handicapped by the absence of their captain, around whom their offense is built, in Paul Hickman, who has been out of the series because of an operation. JOY Class will use the same lineup that has carried them through the season to win the first half championship after four teams had tied for the title.

Regardless of the personnel of the clubs the game will be the best of the series. Each team is confident of taking the championship. The winners will be awarded a handsome trophy.

The address of the evening will be delivered by Bill Corum, well-known sports columnist for the New York Evening Journal.

Damon Runyon, who was to be present and present the medals, will not be present, having been detained in New York.

Music and other entertainment is on the program. Reservations may be made at the Junior Chamber of Commerce or at the Athletic Club. The plates are $3.50 each and the dinner is formal one.

Col. Robert P. (Big Bob) Jones will be toastmaster.

BREAK O' DAY

house near a golf course when he was 11. He started caddying there.

He's worked and gone hungry. He's won the P. G. A. championship. But Revolta is on fire to keep going, to win the open and to go to England and win the British open.

The goad of ambition is strong in him—and he'll get there some day.

THE KEEN DESIRE.

The keen desire—the goad of ambition—must be there. All the kids—in any sport—have it on the way up.

Jack Dempsey had it when he went out and slugged big Jess Willard to pieces at Toledo in 1919. He wanted all that went with the title—fame and money and good clothes and good food and all that sort of thing.

Once he got it—once he tasted it—all he began to go downhill. The keen desire wasn't there any more. They all go the same way. The negro boy Joe Louis will go the same route. He will keep the edge until he wins the title or misses it. And then the way leads downhill.

But the pop-eyed youngsters—on the way up—all have it. They want to see what may be seen from the top rung of the ladder of success.

There are thousands of them today—in golf, boxing, baseball, tennis—all the sports—with the keen desire to get ahead.

IN BASEBALL.

The same is true in baseball. The greatest difference between an amateur team and a professional team is the emotional intensity which the amateur has for the game.

The professional baseball player has it when he gets in the middle of a pennant spurt. But unless the team is driving toward a flag, the play becomes a mechanical, impersonal sort of thing lacking in intensity.

The Atlanta baseball team swept through the Southern association season and play-off with an intense style of play. And then lost it.

That explains why the annual World Series is annually a great show. Both teams have that intensely emotional desire to win.

Longest Ace Modest Deans For Week Won't Guess 208 Yds. At Wins

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—The Associated Press hole-in-one club has swelled to 57 members today and the entries were still streaming in.

Texas led other states in the number of aces, having 17, while Tennessee was second with 10 and California third with eight. The influx of candidates was expected to be materially accelerated as the springtime moves more addicts to the links of the north.

The hole-in-one club has carried them through the season to win the first half championship after four teams had tied for the title.

Regardless of the personnel of the clubs the game will be the best of the series. Each team is confident of taking the championship. The winners will be awarded a handsome trophy.

DOGWOOD MEET TO OPEN TODAY AT CAPITAL CITY

Preliminary Rounds Extend Through Saturday. Match Play Next Week

Capital City golfers will open their annual tournament schedule today with the qualifying rounds for a dogwood tournament. The preliminary rounds will extend through Saturday, with match play scheduled to open next week.

It is a new tourney for members of the Capital City Club and will be played over the winter greens, the first time in the history of the club that a tourney has been played on winter greens.

Two rounds will be played each week and the players will be grouped into flights of 16 each. Handicaps will apply in all matches.

Opening of the annual telephone company blind bogey on Saturday mornings through the spring and summer months will be held Saturday, April 11, on the Capital City course, it was announced Tuesday.

Officials of the Capital City Club announced Tuesday that starting times in the future must be reserved. Play each Saturday and Sunday has been such that there has been a bit of confusion at the first tee and starting times must be reserved, beginning this week.

Newspapermen Qualify Thursday at West End.

Qualifying rounds for a spring invitation newspaper golf tournament on the West End course, will open on Thursday instead of Monday, it was announced yesterday. The qualifying rounds must be completed by Monday night.

E. T. Mize, the club professional, will be in charge of the tourney and will be assisted by members of the West End Club, sponsors of the tourney.

The participants will be permitted as many practice rounds as they desire, but Mize must be notified before a qualifying round starts and the participants must play with some other newspaperman.

Match play will open Tuesday and continue through Friday with the players being divided into flights of 16 for the championship and eight for all others. Handicaps will not apply.

Winter rules will apply both in the qualifying round as well as in all matches.

Bobby Jones Course Damaged by Rain.

Flood waters from the Peachtree creek turned the lowlands of the Bobby Jones municipal golf course into lakes, washed away three bridges and wrought damage estimated at several hundreds of dollars.

The ninth, thirteenth, first and fourteenth greens and fairways were completely under water with part of the ninth fairway washed away. And only the links on the hillsides escaped damage.

Billy Wilson, the club professional, together with workmen from the parks department, went to work late Tuesday after the waters had receded, repairing the greens and fairways.

The course will be in playing condition Thursday or Friday, barring further rains, and several days after the waters had receded, repairing the greens and fairways.

A. W. G. A. Tourney Is Postponed.

A cold wind and a wet soggy course Tuesday caused a postponement of the regular weekly one-day tournament for members of the Atlanta Women's Golf Association, on the East Lake course. It was the second postponement in four weeks due to heavy rains.

Another one-day tourney has been scheduled for next Tuesday on the Capital City Country Club course.

Athens Men Seek Baseball at Night

ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—Night baseball has almost been definitely arranged to be held here this summer, according to an announcement made by local officials.

If the plan is successful, the Athens Commercial league will play its games in the day time, and the Athens City league will stage its night games.

Athens baseball interest set a record with local fans last year when there was increasing rapidly ever since, and with night games in view, enthusiasm is expected to reach a new record.

Winn Assumes Derby Control

CHICAGO, April 7.—(AP)—The man behind the Kentucky Derby for the last 35 years, Colonel Matt Winn, became seriously Derby-minded last night as he packed his grip to get away for Louisville tomorrow personally to take charge of America's most famous horse race.

It will be the 61st renewal of the famous classic, which will be decided on the afternoon of May 2. Colonel Winn has seen every one of them, the first from the back seat of his father's grocery wagon when the little red horse, Aristides, galloped to victory back in 1875. Since 1902 Colonel Winn has been in charge of the race.

White haired, and nearing 75, Colonel Winn doesn't look a day over 60. He has installed $200,000 in improvements in Churchill Downs this spring to add to the comfort of the Derby throng.

CUBA DECLINES DAVIS CUP PLAY AFTER DISPUTE

Australia Meets Winner; America-Mexico Match in Zone Finals.

By Bob Cavagnaro.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—International complications over the venue of a series between Cuba and Australia resulted today in the withdrawal of Cuba from 1936 Davis cup tennis competition.

Drawn against each other in a first-round North American zone tie, the winner of the Cuba-Australia series was scheduled to meet the winner of the American-Mexico zone tie, to be played at Houston, Texas, April 10-12.

With the ultimate victor going into the interzone final at Wimbledon in July.

Difficulties developed quickly when Cuba invited Australia to play in Havana and Australia firmly replied that, in order to save travel and maintenance expenses, the series should be played in the United States.

Australia met and vanquished Cuba in Havana in 1932 in a second-round contest.

Unable to agree upon the place, the two nations selected the United States Lawn Tennis Association as arbitrator, in accordance with Davis cup regulations. After studying briefs submitted by the nations, the arbitrators decided in favor of Australia and suggested that the matches be played in New Orleans, May 1-3.

Thereupon Cuba withdrew.

Thus Australia automatically qualifies for the North American zone final, which will be played at the Germantown Cricket Club, near Philadelphia, May 30, 31 and June 1. The matches will be played on grass—another point Australia held out for and won.

Provisions are being made to erect grandstands at the Germantown Club along lines similar to those erected for the challenge round of 1927.

BAER COMEBACK IS SERIOUS PLAN OF MIKE JACOBS

Campaign, Which Appears Likely, Will Start in Europe.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(UP)—Promoter Mike Jacobs of the 20th Century Club tonight opened negotiations to entice Madcap Maxie Baer back to the ring and to launch the former heavyweight champion on the comeback trail in Europe.

"Uncle" Mike's negotiations are important and significant, coming as they do on the eve of Jeff Dickson's arrival from Paris. Dickson is Europe's outstanding sports promoter.

In a long-distance conversation with Baer's spokesman in California, Mike offered Maxie a handsome guarantee if the Livermore Larriper would tie up with Mike and Jacobs for a series of fights in Europe and later in the United States.

Jacobs offer also included bouts for Brother Buddy Baer, the first of which would be one of the preliminaries to the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling brawl at Yankee Stadium in June.

Baer's decision is expected to be announced tomorrow. If Mike's offer is accepted, the two Baers and their spokesman will fly to New York immediately to sign contracts, Jacobs said.

Baer is only 27 years old. And, regardless of what people say or think, I don't believe a man of his physique, strength and punch can be burned out at that age. If Schmeling could come back, why can't Baer?

Besides, that beating Louis gave him last September probably taught Maxie a lesson. Maybe he'll take care of himself and get in top shape. If he'll do that I'm sure he can come back strong."

Hoffman Holds Max's Contract.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 7.—(UP)—Max Baer is planning a comeback, possibly in England, but will do so under the exclusive management of Ancil Hoffman and not an Oakland "spokesman," the former heavyweight champion told the United Press tonight.

Baer and Hoffman have come to terms on a five-year agreement and all moves of the ex-champion must have the approval of Hoffman, Baer said.

Storm Wrecks Diamond Cards In Two Leagues

By Tom Kinney.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 7.—Coach Cotton Neighbors, of Gainesville High school, stated today that it would be impossible to go through with their N. G. I. C. baseball schedule, which had his team opening at Chamblee this afternoon.

Neighbors had drilled his boys hard for their opening game and, until the storm Monday, had high hopes of winning the conference title. He said today that "there is no way to tell just when we will be able to play a league game."

The Textile league, which is supposed to open May 2, probably will not follow schedule. The New Holland Mill, which had a club entered, is partly demolished and the Owen Osborn plant likewise is torn half in two, there being very little hope that either will support a club for the next 90 days, or more.

John Rogers, president of the Textile league, is dead. He was trapped in the Pruitt-Barrett hardware building and burned with six of the other employees.

The huge grandstand at New Holland is wrecked and the playing field is scattered with bricks and timber. Gainesville Mill and Chicopec, out of the path of the storm, can go on with their baseball program. The other members of the league not damaged, is the Habersham Mill's club, some 25 miles above here. However, it is not probable that the league will operate with only three teams.

With all the help that this little city is getting, there seems very little hope for its baseball program this year.

Yanks Beat Smokies With Homers, 11-6

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 7.—(AP)—The New York Yankees, kept idle since last Friday by unfavorable weather, came out of retirement today and fell heavily upon the Knoxville Smokies, of the Southern association, for an 11-6 victory.

The Yanks pounded three homers, Jess Petty, Ray Moss and Leo Moon, for a total of 13 hits, including home runs by Lou Gehrig, Charley Ruffing and Steve Sundra. Gehrig's blow was his fifth circuit swing of the season.

Ruffing, making his second start of the season, pitched five innings and Sundra finished. Between them they yielded 12 hits.

SPECIAL SQUAD

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

INSTALLMENT XXXIII.

Now, however, the long trip was over. Sociable Joe stirred uneasily and asked that they allow him to sit up propped by many pillows. Jane and Sandy hastened to aid him.

They had noticed a strange appearance of determination in the old man's features. He had volunteered nothing since his arrival and Sandy had asked him no questions, other than to inquire when he desired to see Lee.

"Right now," Sociable Joe had said. So Sandy had telephoned to Buck, down at the end of the hall. As usual, only the many members of the special squad and other agents gathered from points in the west, were on this floor.

Minutes had passed since the call. Jane Bronson, her hands tight clasped to hide her nervousness, went to the window and tried to appear interested in the view of distant mountains. Sandy seated himself and rose, tried the chair again and once more came to his feet. Sociable Joe reclined there in the big bed, his hands outstretched, his eyes straight ahead, a certain grimness about his emaciated features. Suddenly, however, the attention of everyone centered simultaneously. The door opened. Lee Bronson stepped inside, his hands cuffed. Behind him was Buck Wasey and two attendant special agents.

No one spoke for a long moment. Sociable Joe merely looked at the young man in a long, surveying manner, and turned his head. Sandy Ross had little time to study the prisoner, other than to realize the truth of Buck Wasey's statements. The super-ego of an inflated gangster seemed to have departed, leaving Bronson strangely nondescript and worn. Sandy's attention was mainly upon Jane, the look in her eyes as she saw her brother, the paleness of her, the evident striving for courage. At last she said thinly:

"Hello, Lee."

Her greeting seemed to arouse what viciousness yet remained in this shallow featured man. He raised his cuffed hands to his mouth and withdrew the half-smoked cigaret which clung to a lower lip.

"Hello, cop-lover!"

Buck Wasey scowled. Sandy Ross fought back a temptation to slap this sneering little renegade. Two things aided his restraint. One was the tradition of the F. B. I. that wise and not brute strength are the bulwarks of an investigator. The other was the look in Jane Bronson's eyes—a sudden air of determination, of constancy.

"So that is your idea of a law-abiding person, Lee?"

Bronson surveyed her.

"You turned me up, didn't you?"

"Nothing of the kind," snapped Sandy Ross. Jane interrupted.

"Lee seems to have something on his mind," she said. "I might as well answer him." For a moment she paused, looking at Sociable Joe as if for guidance. The old fellow's lips seemed to have taken on a more grim appearance; beyond that there was little indication that he had heard. Jane's head tilted. "I suppose, Lee," came slowly, "that you yourself had nothing to do with being turned up?"

It was a chance which Bronson evidently had been awaiting, a final, desperate effort to place himself in the ranks of the misunderstood, the persecuted.

"What could I have to do with it?" A whine had come into his voice. "I don't even know what it's all about. But you get a letter from somebody and make up your mind I'm doing a lot of wrong things. Then you fall for these G-men—"

"Go on, Lee."

"Ain't that enough? You fall for them. You let them twist you around their finger. Make you believe I've done everything in the world. So you lead them right to me when all I was trying to do—"

"All you were trying to do," interrupted Jane with sudden heat. "was to steal another dress from me so that you could join up with your gang and go out on another robbery!"

Sandy Ross noticed that Sociable Joe had straightened and was watching the girl with narrowed eyes. Jane saw nothing. The sacrifices of years now were demanding their price. Lee Bronson attempted a mumbling reply. She cut him short.

"I know, you turned me up. Perhaps it will help you to hear about him. You weren't turned up last week, or last month or last year. You started turning yourself up when you started stealing from me—back there after mother died and I was trying to keep a roof over our heads."

Trembling, the tears started from Jane's eyes. "When that wasn't enough, you went outside the house for your stealing. And I had to follow—begging people not to prosecute you, making good your thefts, working day and night to keep you out of jail, because mother had asked me to look after you. When you were running with the riff-raff of Kansas City and lying to me about it, telling me not to believe the stories I heard."

Jane's voice broke: "That's when you were turned up, because there wasn't any stopping you. Nothing I could say, nothing I could do. I suppose I let you take that money because I loved to go without food so you could gamble and buy liquor. I suppose it made me proud to go about, practically crawling on my knees to people who wanted to send you to jail—begging for one more chance for you. Yes, all that made me terribly happy. Wonderfully happy. To wake up in the night and know that there wasn't any way out for me. That all the disgrace you were piling up for yourself would fall on me also. Well, it did. Here I am—the sister of a liar, of a thief, a gang member who's proud of shooting policemen. What a wonderful outlook! To go through life shadowed by the thought that I'm the sister of a kill-crazy criminal!"

There was electricity in the room. Even Lee Bronson seemed to feel it. For a moment his face contorted; a return of his old tempestuousness seemed evident. But he could not face her. His head swung slowly; there came the clink of handcuffs as he turned away.

"O, to hell with all that stuff. I suppose it's my fault we had the same mother and father!"

"No, it's not your fault," came in deliberate tones from the wounded man on the bed. "And you needn't worry about it. Because you didn't have the same father and mother, and thank God, she isn't your sister!"

The eyes of every one centered in amazement upon Sociable Joe. The abstract air had vanished from the face of the old man. He had pulled himself upright, his arms braced at his sides, his head shot forward, his eyes centered on Lee Bronson. Again the criminal fought for his old cynicism.

"So you're liping in."

"Yes, I'm liping in, Lee," answered Sociable Joe. The tones were even measured, as though the man were saving every possible strain upon his voice; a precious thing, he must not risk its loss. "I've got a right to lip in, and it's time I was doing it. I've caused enough suffering by trying to believe that somewhere there was a decent bone in your body. You see, Lee, I've got a right to talk to you like this. I'm your father."

Jane's gasp was the only sound in this otherwise strangely still room. Lee Bronson's features had gone blank; he merely stood staring. The special agents, their veins throbbing, risked no word, no action which might disturb the old man. Sociable Joe continued to peer at the prisoner, his eyes boring deep into him, as though they laid aside material things at will.

"It sometimes takes a great deal of strength," he said slowly, "to admit your own offspring. Perhaps if you had shown even the decency of confessing, I might have been weak enough to let you go to prison, still believing you were the son of John and Mary Bronson. I've never been much good in an emergency. But there are some things that even a weak man can't stand."

He raised a thin arm, stabbing a bony finger at the amazed prisoner.

"You see, I married a woman who didn't even know how to spell the word honor. I went to prison because of her—these men—" he swept the room with that lean hand, "know all about that. We had a son at that time, and I had two good friends, a man and a woman who stuck by me when I had my hands together like yours—with steel cuffs on them. They were Jane's father and mother."

"They thought they might never have any children. I had begged them to take you, bring you up as their own child, give you a chance in life. I was afraid to remain as your father; thought maybe that my term in prison might wreck your life. So they took you—as their own child. Then they got a wish of their own. Jane came along. Not much of a break for her, as it turned out."

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

VISITS IN MEXICO'S CAPITAL.

The Cathedral of Mexico City.

It may be that the legend was in part based on facts. A wrecked sailing ship of Europe may have drifted to the shore of Mexico, with only one man aboard alive. At any rate, the legend was important. It is said that Quetzacoatl had promised to come back again.

Because they trusted the legend, the Aztecs did not at first fight against Cortes and his soldiers. It appears that even after his capture, Montezuma believed that Cortes might be "the white god."

If Cortes and his men had let the Aztecs go on with the ways of their religion, Mexico might have been spared much of the bloodshed which came with the conquest. As it was, the Spaniards went into Aztec temples and knocked down images of the gods. This was done even while the whites were, in a sense, guests of the Indians. After open warfare started, the breaking of images and the burning of temples became widespread.

As we think of the deeds of those Spaniards, we must not forget that they had special reason for trying to stamp out the Aztec religion. A part of the faith called for sacrifice of human beings in America. It is also believed that Captain John Smith, of Virginia, had himself visited Plymouth several years before the landing of the Mayflower, and that it was he, not the Pilgrims, who named the place.

(Copyright, 1938, for The Constitution)

Contrary to general belief—and to some history books—the first shipload of American settlers did not land at Plymouth Rock, or anywhere near that point. The landed at Jamestown, Va., about 12 years before the Plymouth landing, and established the first English colony in America. It is also believed that Captain John Smith, of Virginia, had himself visited Plymouth several years before the landing of the Mayflower, and that it was he, not the Pilgrims, who named the place.

4,000 HOMELESS, DECLARES PASTOR

Mass Funerals To Be Held; Dire Need of Food Reported.

By THE REV. R. Q. LEAVELL, Pastor of the Gainesville, Ga., First Baptist Church.
(Written Expressly for the Associated Press.)
GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—I have just completed a survey of the damage done to this city by the tornado and I would estimate there are 4,000 homeless.

There is a dire need of food in the city. All that we have been sent in food which has been salvaged from demolished stores is all spoiled from water.

Some of our most prominent citizens have been trapped and burned. There have been close to 100 embalmed in this one church alone (First Methodist).

Funerals for the dead will probably start today. They will be mass funerals because there are few churches left intact in the city. The First Baptist church was virtually demolished. A new $50,000 unit to the church which was just completed, has been destroyed. Our new $25,000 federal building which was recently finished, has been damaged considerably.

It is wonderful the way outside help has rushed to our assistance. There are about 2,000 workers from surrounding towns here in addition to 200 doctors and 400 nurses. About 400 CCC workers have been rushed to Gainesville from nearby soil conservation camps and they have been employed in clearing the streets of the city so that ambulances and other vehicles can pass quickly to places where needed.

STATE WORKERS BOOST GAINESVILLE AID FUND
The hat was passed for Gainesville storm sufferers at the capitol yesterday and within a few minutes the fund reached $500 and was still growing.

The collection was started after Governor Talmadge suggested that department heads canvass their departments for contributions.
